Medical Practice in Modern England, 2003-01-01 Before World War II the great majority of practicing doctors in England and Wales were general practitioners They performed their own surgery and were accustomed to treating a wide variety of illnesses and symptoms Specialists were few in number tended to practice in large towns and were often associated with major hospitals But rapidly changing medical institutions and services in the twentieth century have compelled specialization even among more modest doctors and hospitals While medical specialization was not new for centuries physicians were differentiated from surgeons twentieth century science and technology emphasized and accelerated this difference rapidly Medical care began to shift from services rendered by the general practitioner to the employment of those doctors with a special interest for example pathology neurology or cardiology Author Rosemary Stevens an expert in public health traces especially within the last two centuries the patterns of English medical practice institutions staffing and training and their influence on specialization the British National Health Service Act and post World War II developments Stevens discusses the ever relevant issues of income determination medical education and the future of the general practitioner in an age of specialization Along with its companion volume Medical Practice in Modern England is a book that will be of lasting value to scholars of medicine medical care organization economics and modern social history It is of special importance at a time of crisis in the health care systems of many European Societies A fine book Carefully constructed factual elaborately researched gracefully written George A Silver M D professor emeritus of epidemiology and public health Yale University Rosemary Stevens is professor emeritus of history and sociology of science at the University of Pennsylvania Educated at Oxford Yale and Manchester she has also taught at Yale University and Tulane University She is the author of American Medicine and the Public Interest and In Sickness and in Wealth American Hospitals in the Twentieth Century A Caring County? Steven King,Gillian Gear,2013-11-01 This comparative study gathers together new research by local historians into aspects of welfare in Hertfordshire spanning four centuries and focusing on towns and villages across the county including Ashwell Cheshunt Hertford Pilton and Royston amongst many others In so doing it makes a valuable contribution to the current debate about the spatial and chronological variation in the character of welfare regimes within single counties let alone more widely As well as viewing poor relief geographically and chronologically the book also considers the treatment of particular groups such as the aged the mad children and the unemployed and shows how within the constraints of the relevant welfare laws each group was dealt with differently giving a more nuanced picture than has perhaps been the case before The overarching question that the book attempts to answer is how effectively Hertfordshire cared for those in need With chapters on madhouses workhouses certified industrial schools the Foundling Hospital pensions and medical care the book covers a very broad range of topics through which a complex picture emerges While some officials seem to have been driven by a relatively narrow sense of their obligations to the poor and vulnerable others appear to have tailored welfare packages to their precise needs Naturally self interest played a part if the weakest citizens were well managed vagrancy might be lessened the spread of disease contained and control maintained over the cost of looking after the poor and sick It seems that Hertfordshire was relatively nimble and sensitive in discovering and treating its people s needs Evidence is beginning to emerge in other words that Hertfordshire was in essence a caring county
