

4 Steps of Perspective Taking

01

As soon as two people share a common space, they have a thought about each other. I have a thought about you; you have a thought about me.

02

I consider the other person's intentions & motives. If they seem suspicious, I will monitor the person more closely. The other person will also consider my intentions & motives.

03

Each person considers what the other may be thinking about them. Is it positive, negative, neutral? Is there history between us upon which we weigh these thoughts?

04

I monitor & possibly modify my behavior to keep the other person thinking about me the way I want them to think about me. They are doing the same for me.
