Dennis,2017-09-08 Throughout history the media has primarily been produced by adults for adults about adults Increasingly children have become a matter of high priority in the modern media society and as they have they have also become the subject of much concern From debates in Congress about the detrimental effects of movies comic books and video games over the last century to efforts to court children as media consumers there is a clear recognition that the media are not now and probably never were purely adult fare Their impact on children is at issue TV Guide ,1990 Nickelodeon Nation Heather Hendershot,2004-02 The first examination of the most popular tv network for kids Essays are both scholarly as well as journalistic Nick employees and psychologists New York Magazine ,1986-09-29 New York magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country With award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine's consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea Channeling Violence James T. Hamilton,2021-04-13 If it bleeds it leads The phrase captures television news directors' famed preference for opening newscasts with the most violent stories they can find And what is true for news is often true for entertainment programming where violence is used as a product to attract both viewers and sponsors In this book James Hamilton presents the first major theoretical and empirical examination of the market for television violence Hamilton approaches television violence in the same way that other economists approach the problem of pollution that is as an example of market failure He argues that television violence like pollution generates negative externalities defined as costs borne by others than those involved in the production activity Broadcasters seeking to attract viewers may not fully bear the costs to society of their violent programming if those costs include such factors as increased levels of aggression and crime in society Hamilton goes on to say that the comparison to pollution remains relevant when considering how to deal with the problem Approaches devised to control violent programming such as restricting it to certain times and rating programs according to the violence they contain have parallels in zoning and education policies designed to protect the environment Hamilton examines in detail the microstructure of incentives that operate at every level of television broadcasting from programming and advertising to viewer behavior so that remedies can be devised to reduce violent programming without restricting broadcasters' right to compete New York
