Hutchinson, 2012-12-02 Nutrition and Aging is a collection of papers presented at the Fifth Bristol Myers Symposium on Nutrition Research held in Boston Massachusetts from October 31 to November 1 1985 Contributors discuss the significant influence of nutrition on aging and specifically the role of nutrition in preventing and limiting the physical mental and emotional problems associated with the aging process This book reviews findings that include the effects of the aging process on the body's physiological functions and the effects of nutrient intake on organ function Consideration is also given to the gap between the documented nutrient intake and nutrient needs of the elderly as it may influence the aging process The first chapter is a brief overview of the variety of problems that have to be resolved in determining the role of nutrition in aging The discussion then turns to the relationship of nutrition to changes in physiological function during the aging process along with factors that influence the nutrient needs of the elderly The final chapters focus on the impact of nutrition on the etiology of age related degenerative diseases This book will be of interest to scientists as well as students and researchers engaged in nutrition research and its growing importance to the prevention and treatment of disease Nutritional Intervention in the Aging Process H.J. Armbricht, J.M. Prendergast, R.M. Coe, 2012-12-06 There has been much popular and scientific interest in the fields of nutrition and aging in recent years As the importance of proper nutrition in children and young adults becomes more fully understood it is natural to wonder if proper nutrition could play a similar role in later life Recent research has indicated that nutrition can potentially intervene in the aging process in at least two ways First studies in animals and humans have shown that nutrition can be used to improve functional status which in turn is related to perceived quality of life Second nutritional manipulation has been used to extend maximal life span in laboratory animals How these interesting findings apply to the human situation remains to be explored The purpose of this book is twofold The first is to present recent advances in our basic knowledge of how nutrition and aging interact with each other The second is to discuss some applications of this knowledge to the care of the elderly patient The interaction between aging and nutrition is complex because each may act on the other in either a synergistic or antagonistic fashion Aging may alter the nutritional status of the elderly by affecting the way nutrients are absorbed and utilized by the body Aging may also influence food intake and therefore nutritional status by decreasing the palatability of food The environment of the elderly may change so they are less likely to eat well balanced meals      Nutrition and Aging National Institutes of Health (U.S.), Charles H. Barrows, 1979

Nutrition, Aging, and the Elderly D.E. Danford, H.N. Munro, 2013-11-11 The proportion of the population over 65 years of age is increasing steadily in most industrialized countries In the United States the proportion of elderly people has risen from four percent in 1900 to 11 % in 1978 and is projected to be 14% by the year 2000 The occurrence of debilitating chronic diseases in the elderly increases with each additional year These diseases along with the natural loss of tissue function that occurs throughout adult life impose a heavy burden on the health care system Nutrition plays an important etiologic role in many of these degenerative changes Consequently the aging segment of the population presents a challenge to the nutrition scientist who should be able to recommend optimal intakes of nutrients to minimize the functional losses associated with aging and to optimize the health of those already elderly This sixth volume in the series Human Nutrition A Comprehensive Treatise provides a conspectus of the various interactions of nutrition with the aging process and a comprehensive survey of current knowledge of the amounts of individual nutrients needed by the elderly The volume begins with a general survey of the multifaceted relationship of nutrition to aging followed by four chapters on how nutrition can affect age related changes in selected body functions The next six chapters cover the available evidence regarding the needs of the elderly for dietary energy protein calcium trace elements vitamins and fiber      Clinical Nutrition and Aging Chad Cox, 2017-10-02 This title includes a number of Open Access chapters Sarcopenia the loss of muscle mass and strength that occurs with advancing age is a major health challenge particularly in North America Europe and Japan which have large aging populations This compendium volume is a valuable addition to the existing literature providing state of the art information on the most effective prevention and treatment options Included are research articles on nutrition management and the prevention of sarcopenia protein therapy for sarcopenia effect of exercise on sarcopenia and other therapeutic strategies including antioxidants and steroids      The Relationship Between Nutrition, Aging, and Health United States. Prinsley, Harold H. Standstead, 1990 This insightful volume is a response to the growing evidence of malnutrition in the elderly arising from such factors as difficulty in ambulation limited financial resources gastrointestinal disorders medications that interfere with nutrient utilization and limited psychological support Nutrition and Aging offers a full appraisal of these and other impediments to good nutrition and defines the role of nutrition in both the aging process and the degenerative diseases that afflict the elderly In depth analysis shows how the aging process is affected by such dietary factors as vitamins omega 3 fatty acids protein trace elements and alcohol Related topics include the effect of nutrition on immunity hepatic drug metabolism the heart cancer and anemia

Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, 2012-06-15 The U S population of older adults is predicted to grow rapidly as baby boomers those born between 1946 and 1964 begin to reach 65 years of age Simultaneously advancements in medical care and improved awareness of healthy lifestyles have led to longer life expectancies The Census Bureau projects that the population of Americans 65 years of age and older will rise from approximately 40 million in 2010 to 55 million in 2020 a 36 percent increase Furthermore older adults are choosing to live independently in the community setting rather than residing in an institutional environment Furthermore the types of services needed by this population are shifting due to changes in their health issues Older adults have historically been viewed as underweight and frail however over the past decade there has been an increase in the number of obese older persons Obesity in older adults is not only associated with medical comorbidities such as diabetes it is also a major risk factor for functional decline and homebound status The baby boomers have a greater prevalence of obesity than any of their historic counterparts and projections forecast an aging population with even greater chronic disease burden and disability In light of the increasing numbers of older adults choosing to live independently rather than in nursing homes and the important role nutrition can play in healthy aging the Institute of Medicine IOM convened a public workshop to illuminate issues related to community based delivery of nutrition services for older adults and to identify nutrition interventions and model programs Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community summarizes the presentations and discussions prepared from the workshop transcript and slides This report examines nutrition related issues of concern experienced by older adults in the community including nutrition screening food insecurity sarcopenic obesity dietary patterns for older adults and economic issues This report explores transitional care as individuals move from acute subacute or chronic care settings to the community and provides models of transitional care in the community This report also provides examples of successful intervention models in the community setting and covers the discussion of research gaps in knowledge about nutrition interventions and services for older adults in the community

Handbook of Pain and Aging David I. Mostofsky, Jacob Lomranz, 2013-11-11 From time to time professional journals and edited volumes devote some of their pages to considerations of pain and aging as they occur among the aged in different cultures and populations One starts from several reasonable assumptions among them that aging per se is not a disease process yet the risk and frequency of disease processes increase with ongoing years The physical body's functioning and ability to restore all forms of damage and insult slow down the immune system becomes compromised and the slow growing pathologies reach their critical mass in the later years The psychological body also becomes weaker with unfulfilled promises and expectations and with tragedies that visit individuals and families and the prospect that whatever worlds remain to be conquered will most certainly not be met with success in the rapidly passing days and years that can only culminate in death Despair and depression coupled with infirmity and sensory and or motor inefficiency aggravate both the threshold and the tolerance for discomfort and synergistically collaborate to perpetuate a vicious cycle in which the one may mask the other Although the clinician is armed with the latest advances in medicine and pharmacology significant improvement continues to elude her or him The geriatric specialist all too familiar with such realities usually can offer little else than a hortative to learn to live with it but the powers and effectiveness of learning itself have declined
