Leveraging Food Technology for Obesity Prevention and Reduction Efforts Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Food Forum, 2011-08-26 Obesity is a major public health challenge More than one third of the U.S. adult population is considered obese a figure that has more than doubled since the mid 1970s Among children obesity rates have more than tripled over the same period Not only is obesity associated with numerous medical complications but it incurs significant economic cost At its simplest obesity is a result of an energy imbalance with obese and overweight people consuming more energy calories than they are expending During the last 10 20 years behavioral scientists have made significant progress toward building an evidence base for understanding what drives energy imbalance in overweight and obese individuals Meanwhile food scientists have been tapping into this growing evidence base to improve existing technologies and create new technologies that can be applied to alter the food supply in ways that reduce the obesity burden on the American population Leveraging Food Technology for Obesity Prevention and Reduction Effort examines the complexity of human eating behavior and explores ways in which the food industry can continue to leverage modern food processing technologies to influence energy intake The report also examines the opportunities and challenges of altering the food supply both at home and outside the home and outlines lessons learned best practices and next steps Leveraging
