The Ecology of Plant

Litter Decomposition in Stream Ecosystems Christopher M. Swan, Luz Boyero, Cristina Canhoto, 2021-06-30 With almost

90% of terrestrial plant material entering the detrital pool the processing of this significant carbon source is a critical ecosystem function to understand Riverine ecosystems are estimated to receive process and transport nearly 1.9 Pg of terrestrial carbon per year globally highlighting the focus many freshwater ecologists have on the factors that explain decomposition rates of senesced plant material Since Webster and Benfield offered the first comprehensive review of these factors in 1986 there has been an explosion of research addressing key questions about the ecological interactions at play Ecologists have developed field and laboratory techniques as well as created global scale collaborations to disentangle the many drivers involved in the decomposition process This book encapsulates these 30 years of research describing the state of knowledge on the ecology of plant litter decomposition in stream ecosystems in 22 chapters written by internationally renowned experts on the subject

Forest Ecosystems Juan A. Blanco, Yueh-Hsin Lo, 2012-03-07 The common idea for many people is that forests are just a collection of trees However they are much more than that They are a complex functional system of interacting and often interdependent biological physical and chemical components the biological part of which has evolved to perpetuate itself This complexity produces combinations of climate soils trees and plant species unique to each site resulting in hundreds of different forest types around the world Logically trees are an important component for the research in forest ecosystems but the wide variety of other life forms and abiotic components in most forests means that other elements such as wildlife or soil nutrients should also be the focal point in ecological studies and management plans to be carried out in forest ecosystems In this book the readers can find the latest research related to forest ecosystems but with a different twist The research described here is not just on trees and is focused on the other components structures and functions that are usually overshadowed by the focus on trees but are equally important to maintain the diversity function and services provided by forests The first section of this book explores the structure and biodiversity of forest ecosystems whereas the second section reviews the research done on ecosystem structure and functioning The third and last section explores the issues related to forest management as an ecosystem level activity all of them from the perspective of the other parts of a forest

The Impacts of Climate Change and Human Activities on the Structure and Function of Wetland/Grassland Ecosystems Zhongqing Yan, Kerou Zhang, Yunpeng Luo, Xiaodong Zhang, 2023-10-31 Wetlands and grassland are important components of natural ecosystems which have rich values in maintaining ecological balance regional economy and human development Wetlands can provide freshwater resources and food sources for human beings purify the water environment and mitigate climate change The grassland ecosystem has such ecological functions as windbreak sand fixation soil preservation climate regulation air purification water conservation and so on which are closely related to human survival and well being In recent years climate change and human activities have caused a profound impact on the structure and function of wetland and grassland ecosystems and the problems of decline in size and function have attracted extensive attention from researchers globally However there are still many uncertainties about the variety of wetland and grassland ecosystem composition structure and dynamics as well as how they respond and adapt to climate change and human activities

The Structure and Function of Aquatic Microbial Communities Christon J. Hurst, 2019-05-13 This book discusses how aquatic microbial communities develop interactive metabolic coordination both within and between species to optimize their energetics It explains that microbial community structuration often includes functional stratification among a multitude of organisms that variously exist either suspended in the water lodged in sediments or bound to one another as biofilms on solid surfaces The authors describe techniques that can be used for preparing and distributing microbiologically safe drinking water which presents the challenge of successfully removing the pathogenic members of the aquatic microbial community and then safely delivering that water to consumers Drinking water distribution systems have their own microbial ecology which we must both understand and control in order to maintain the safety of the water supply Since studying aquatic microorganisms often entails identifying them the book also discusses techniques for successfully isolating and cultivating bacteria As such it appeals to microbiologists microbial ecologists and water quality scientists
