The New Economy in Transatlantic Perspective Kurt Huebner, 2005-02-03 What's left from the new economy This book takes an unfashionable perspective and shows that despite all the mistaken ideas and exaggerations the technological changes of the 1990s still have important effects today Economic history shows that technological revolutions tend to generate deep economic and social crises before a temporary state of equilibrium is reached The established modes of accumulations and regimes of regulation of national capitalisms and international capitalism have been undermined by the collapse of the high tech asset bubble Financial markets are still in disarray What can be observed however is that national economies are better positioned to tackle the crisis than others Why is this This and other important questions are tackled by an international team of contributors including Daniele Archibugi Harald Hagemann Bruno Amable Martin Heidenreich and David Gibbs This volume should be of great interest to all those working at the intersection of international politics and economics

The New Economy in Transatlantic Perspective Kurt Hubner, 2005

The New Economy and Economic Growth in Europe and the US David B. Audretsch, Paul J.J. Welfens, 2013-06-29 The strong productivity growth of the US and Scandinavian countries in Europe in the 1990s has raised the question whether the ICT sector information and communication technology that is computers plus telecommunications plus digital services is the new driving engine of high growth in leading OECD countries Judging by the empirical evidence for the US including a new study by McKinsey which gives mixed evidence it is still too early to clearly dismiss Robert G Gordon's hypothesis that the acceleration of US output growth is due to cyclical factors and increased productivity growth in the computer sector The counter hypothesis is associated with research by Stiroh and others who argue that there are positive productivity spillover effects from ICT to other sectors Indeed it is not clear ex ante whether mainly the Old Economy or the so called New Economy stands to benefit most from high innovation rates and strong productivity shifts associated with the spreading of digital services Interestingly the increased economic role of the internet also contributes to the internationalization of the economy since more services have become tradable and growing import competition itself could stimulate productivity growth and thus contribute to higher growth If ICT plays a key role in the new economy there are important implications in the differential degree to which Germany and the US have implemented ICT
