Modelling Human Motion Nicoletta Noceti, Alessandra Sciutti, Francesco Rea, 2020-07-09 The new frontiers of robotics research foresee future scenarios where artificial agents will leave the laboratory to progressively take part in the activities of our daily life This will require robots to have very sophisticated perceptual and action skills in many intelligence demanding applications with particular reference to the ability to seamlessly interact with humans It will be crucial for the next generation of robots to understand their human partners and at the same time to be intuitively understood by them In this context a deep understanding of human motion is essential for robotics applications where the ability to detect represent and recognize human dynamics and the capability for generating appropriate movements in response sets the scene for higher level tasks This book provides a comprehensive overview of this challenging research field closing the loop between perception and action and between human studies and robotics The book is organized in three main parts The first part focuses on human motion perception with contributions analyzing the neural substrates of human action understanding how perception is influenced by motor control and how it develops over time and is exploited in social contexts The second part considers motion perception from the computational perspective providing perspectives on cutting edge solutions available from the Computer Vision and Machine Learning research fields addressing higher level perceptual tasks Finally the third part takes into account the implications for robotics with chapters on how motor control is achieved in the latest generation of artificial agents and how such technologies have been exploited to favor human robot interaction This book considers the complete human robot cycle from an examination of how humans perceive motion and act in the world to models for motion perception and control in artificial agents In this respect the book will provide insights into the perception and action loop in humans and machines joining together aspects that are often addressed in independent investigations As a consequence this book positions itself in a field at the intersection of such different disciplines as Robotics Neuroscience Cognitive Science Psychology Computer Vision and Machine Learning By bridging these different research domains the book offers a common reference point for researchers interested in human motion for different applications and from different standpoints spanning Neuroscience Human Motor Control Robotics Human Robot Interaction Computer Vision and Machine Learning Chapter The Importance of the Affective Component of Movement in Action Understanding of this book is available open access under a CC BY 4 0 license at link.springer.com The Rational Infant T. Fagen, Harlene Hayne, 2002-03-01 The Progress in Infancy Research Series is dedicated to the presentation of innovative and exciting research on infants both human and animal Each volume in the series is designed to stand alone and contains autonomous chapters which are based on high quality programs of research with infants These chapters integrate the work of the authors with that of other experts working in the same or related areas The authors wish to present high quality critical syntheses bearing on infant perception and sensation learning and memory processes and other aspects of development This series will be a forum for the presentation of technological breakthroughs methodological advances and new integrations that might create platforms for future programmatic work on the complexities of infant behavior and development Each volume in the series is dedicated to an outstanding investigator whose research has illuminated the nature of infant behavior and development and whose contributions to the field have been of seminal importance Progress in infancy Research Carolyn Rovee-Collier, Lewis P. Learning and the Infant Mind Amanda Woodward, Amy Needham, 2008-09-08 When asking how cognition comes to take its mature form learning seems to be an obvious factor to consider However until quite recently there has been very little contact between investigations of how infants learn and what infants know For example on the one hand research efforts focused on infants foundational conceptual knowledge what they know about the physical permanence of objects causal relations and human intentions often do not consider how learning may contribute to the structure of this knowledge On the other hand research efforts focused on infants perceptual and motor learning how they extract information from the environment tune their behavior patterns according to this information and generalize learning to new situations often do not consider the potential impacts of these perceptual and learning mechanisms the structure of conceptual knowledge Although each of these research efforts has made significant progress this research has done little to narrow the divide between the disparate traditions of learning and knowledge The chapters in this book document for the first time the insights that emerge when researchers who come from diverse domains and use different approaches make a genuine attempt to bridge this divide The authors consider both infants knowledge across domains including knowledge of objects physical relations between objects categories people and language and learning broadly construed bringing to bear direct laboratory manipulations of learning and more general considerations of the relations between experience and knowledge These authors have begun to consider whether and how the products of learning go beyond the input in several senses As a result several converging trends emerge across Whese diverse points of view These authors have begun to investigate whether infants derive relatively abstract representations from experience as well as the extent to which infants generalize information learned in one context to a new context They have also begun to investigate the extent to which learning is generative constraining and informing subsequent learning

Development of Perception in Infancy Martha E. Arterberry, Philip J. Kellman, 2016 In Development of Perception in Infancy The Cradle of Knowledge Revisited Martha E. Arterberry and Philip J. Kellman study the methods and data of scientific research on infant perception introducing and analyzing topics such as space pattern object and motion perception through philosophical theoretical and historical contexts Since the original publication of this book in 1998 MIT Arterberry and Kellman address in addition the mechanisms of change placing the basic capacities of infants at different ages and exploring what it is that infants do with this information

Learning About Objects in Infancy Amy Work Needham, 2016-03-17 How do young infants experience the world around them How similar or different are infants experiences from adults experiences of similar situations How do infants progress from relatively sparse knowledge and expectations early in life to much more elaborate knowledge and expectations just several months later We know that much of infants learning before four to five months of age is visually based As they develop the ability to reach for objects independently they can explore objects that are of particular interest to them a new skill that must be important for their learning Through this transition to independent reaching and exploration infants go a long way toward forming their own understandings of the objects around them Towards the end of the first year of life infants begin manipulating one object relative to another and this skill sets the stage for them to begin using objects instrumentally using one object to create changes in other objects This new ability opens up many opportunities for infants to learn about using tools In this volume Amy Work Needham provides an extensive overview of her research on infant learning with a particular focus on how infants learn about objects She begins with an explanation of how basic aspects of how infants visual exploration of objects allows them to create new knowledge about objects and object categories She continues with a description of infants visual and manual learning about hand held tools and how these tools can be used to achieve goals Throughout she focuses on active learning and development which results in infants making important contributions to their own learning about objects She concludes by synthesizing the findings discussed pulls out recurring themes across studies and brings together fundamental principles of how infants learn about objects

First Steps in Mental Growth David R. Major, 2015-06-26 Excerpt from First Steps in Mental Growth: A Series of Studies in the Psychology of Infancy The studies composing this volume are based in the main upon a record which I kept of my child R from his birth to the end of his third year and they are made up in large measure of transcripts from my note books The principal aim of the Studies is to present data observational and experimental bearing upon certain aspects of infant mind which have a special attraction for me mainly because they seem to be fundamental to later mental development also for the reason that in studying them one is carried back to the rudimentary processes from which spring the leading characteristics of the developed mind My original plan was to make notes as full as time would permit and as accurate as possible and then to print the bare record But this plan was abandoned for two reasons first it was found that additional explanation was necessary to make the record intelligible In the second place one cannot undertake the arrangement of material of this kind without thinking about it without wondering what it means why and how it came to be what it is what were the conditions of its appearance what are its inter relations and what its relation to later mental development About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Psychological Development From Infancy Marc H. Bornstein, William Kessen, 2017-12-12 Originally published in 1979 this volume represented a unique attempt to connect the usually separated fields of infancy studies and studies of older children In each chapter eminent research workers attempt to cross the theoretical empirical and methodological barriers that had traditionally separated the study of preverbal infants from the study of verbal children and adults at the time These completely new and original contributions traced the developmental links between birth and conversation within three major categories perceptual cognitive and language development Although the chapters range from reports of well defined research areas to theoretical propositions the aim throughout was to relate the events of the first year of life to the child's later perceptual and cognitive activity This book will still be of interest for all concerned with child development and related areas in that it demonstrates the remarkable range of observations about infants brought under a single guiding set of questions about continuity stability and the sources of change during and after the first year of life

The Cradle of Knowledge Philip J. Kellman, Martha E. Arterberry, 2000 In this comprehensive treatment of infant perception Philip Kellman and Martha Arterberry bring together work at multiple levels to produce a new picture of perception's origins
