Gender in Ancient Cyprus Diane Bolger, 2003. Gender in Ancient Cyprus examines some of the fundamental facets of gender as they intersect with the dynamics of social, political, and economic change in Cyprus, beginning with the earliest traces of human habitation on the island to the final phases of the Bronze Age. The book closely analyzes gender as it relates to the domestic space, technology, and labor, ritual, and social identity, and the roles of children, as well as the practices of modern-day Near Eastern archaeology and the roles of women in it. Mothering from the Field Bahiyah M. Muhammad, Melanie-Angela Neuilly, 2019-06-14. The heated national conversation about gender equality and women in the workforce is something that women in academia have been concerned with and writing about for at least a decade. Overall, the conversation has focused on identifying how women in general and mothers in particular fare in the academy as a whole, as well as offering tips on how to maximize success. Aside from a long-standing field-specific debate in anthropology, rare are the volumes focusing on the particulars of motherhood's impacts on how scientific research is conducted, particularly when it comes to field research. Mothering from the Field offers both a mosaic of perspectives from current women scientists' experiences of conducting field research across a variety of sub-disciplines while raising children and an analytical framework to understand how we can redefine methodological and theoretical contributions based on mothers' experiences in order not just to promote healthier, more inclusive nurturing and supportive environments in physical life and social sciences but also to revolutionize how we conceptualize research.

Gender Trouble and Current Archaeological Debates Uroš Matić, Bisserka Gaydarska, Laura Coltofean, Marta Díaz-Guardamino, 2024-10-28. This volume challenges the status quo by addressing a selection of intensely discussed themes in contemporary archaeological practice from a gender perspective. It aims to demonstrate that gender is intrinsic to archaeology and that gender archaeology can enrich our studies irrespective of the discipline's possible future directions and so-called paradigm shifts. The scholarly contributions commissioned for this volume critically discuss and reflect on a wide range of concepts, ideas, principles, and theories presently applied in archaeology within the framework of gender. The chapters included in the first part deal with themes in world archaeology that have little or no focus on gender, such as the Third Science Revolution, e.g., ancient DNA, stable isotopes, analyses, big data, posthumanism, e.g., new materialism, symmetrical archaeology, and the ontological turn, and digital archaeology and heritage. The second part focuses on themes in which gender archaeology has made serious advances intersectionality social inequality violence mobility The third part deals with themes crucial for contemporary archaeology and society namely gender education gender representation in museum exhibitions and the future of gender archaeology The volume concludes with a coda chapter that critically assesses the preceding contributions and the volume as a whole The book offers a gender balanced and inclusive authorship consisting of both well established and early career researchers closely connected to the EAA whose professionally culturally and geographically diverse backgrounds and experiences enrich the viewpoints discussed in the chapters The targeted audience is archaeologists from all theoretical and scientific backgrounds at all stages of their career Chapter 2 Sex Gender and the Third Science Revolution is available open access under a Creative Commons Attribution 4 0 International License via link springer.com
