forces of capitalism and biases in international and development communication messages provides a historical perspective and a contemporary analysis of the field of international communication and its application to development communication. The book examines how communication media and telecommunications are considered central to globalization and to national development and discusses globalization in history, the role of media, changes in structural biases of media and telecommunication institutions, national forces of capitalism and biases in international and development communication messages. The book is divided into two parts: Part One revolves around media institutions and the conditions under which they have been used by the state and private capital; Part Two focuses on development communication applications by various active researchers and professors drawn from Latin America, South Asia, and North America. With contributions from experts in the field, each part of the book begins with a chapter on theories and closes with one on issues. Chapters within each part examine the distinct and broadly recognized topics of research within each area, such as media corporations in the age of globalization, transnational advertising, the global/local dialectic, and polysemic effects, development communication campaigns, communication technology and development, and international development communication.

Global Communication Karin Wilkins, Joe Straubhaar, Shanti Kumar, 2013-09-11. This volume interrogates what global means in the context of communication and who benefits from global communication practices and industries. Emerging scholars contribute their unique perspectives in communication scholarship, charting innovative directions for research that connects empirical evidence with pressing questions of social significance. This critical reflection leads to considering problems that result from the way global communication becomes mobilized in the practice of journalism and development, as well as the ICT industry. Global Communication defines the term globalization through understanding the cultural geography of global, regional, national, and local media. Critical evaluations of media production, distribution, and consumption practices within cultural contexts offer insights into how people mediate the global. Chapters draw attention to communications in Latin America, the Arab World, and South Asia, complicating territorial boundaries and exploring how local audience and industry practices work within global as well as local configurations.

Radical Communications explores unauthorized messages we see in the cities we live in and their impact on the construction of social reality Michael Tsangaris treats the city as a text and examines the political slogans graffiti and street art of Athens as complex visual signs in an alternative communication system He argues that the legitimacy aesthetic value and social acceptability of these expressions depend on the time place and social group or individual that interprets them Finally his analysis reveals the contradictory character of the contemporary city It shows a city of social inequalities cultural diversity multinational encounters of conflicts between age groups and political economic and epidemic crises a city of one dimensional thinking apathy and consumer fetishism but also a city that aspires to the dream of a better society and holds utopian promise

Activism on the Web Veronica Barassi,2015-05-22 Activism on the Web examines the everyday tensions that political activists face as they come to terms with the increasingly commercialized nature of web technologies and sheds light on an important yet under investigated dimension of the relationship between contemporary forms of social protest and internet technologies Drawing on anthropological and ethnographic research amongst three very different political groups in the UK Italy and Spain the book argues that activists everyday internet uses are largely defined by processes of negotiation with digital capitalism These processes of negotiation are giving rise to a series of collective experiences which are defined by the tension between activists democratic needs on one side and the cultural processes reinforced by digital capitalism on the other In looking at the encounter between activist cultures and digital capitalism the book focuses in particular on the tension created by self centered communication processes and networked individualism by corporate surveillance and data mining and by fast capitalism and the temporality of immediacy Activism on the Web suggests that if we want to understand how new technologies are affecting political participation and democratic processes we should not focus on disruption and novelty but we should instead explore the complex dialectics between digital discourses and digital practices between the technical and the social between the political economy of the web and its lived critique
