New Directions In Understanding Dementia And Alzheimers Disease:

New Directions in Understanding Dementia and Alzheimer's Disease Taher Zandi, Richard J. Ham, 2012-12-06 The management of Alzheimer's Disease and the related dementias is one of the major challenges to health care professionals and American society at large for the coming decade and the coming millennium. The rapid growth of the over eighty five population group which, as recent studies have confirmed and as many of us clinicians have long suspected, has an even higher prevalence than previously quoted of dementing disorders is the major cause of this. We are thus challenged by, as Bernard Isaac used to call it, the survival of the unfittest as well as the optimistic approach of bringing life to years. As John F. Kennedy said, 'The fact is that we as a society tend to confuse treatment and cure and prevention.' As the proceedings of the conference which this book represents emphasize, there is considerable work going on about the potential prevention of or at least the reduction of symptomatology in these illnesses by interventions genetically, chemically and so forth. However, the more we find out, the more complicated it becomes and the more heterogeneous Alzheimer's and the related disorders appear to be, not only in their manifestations as clinicians have long recognized but also in the individual initiating and underlying processes. For these reasons, absolute preventive techniques or the likelihood of an intervention which will reverse the process in a high proportion of patients do not appear to be just around the corner.

New Directions in Understanding Dementia and Alzheimer's Disease Taher Zandi, Richard J. Ham, 1991-01-31 2015: Which new directions for Alzheimer's disease? Ludovic Martin, 2015-06-03 According to the World Health Organization, more than 40 million people in the world are affected with dementia. To date, 60-70% of the cases of dementia are attributed to the Alzheimer's disease (AD). This neurodegenerative disorder gradually takes place over a period of at least 20 years before the onset of symptoms which are impaired memory, apathy and depression. The characteristics of AD consist in neurofibrillary tangles, intraneuronal aggregates of hyperphosphorylated tau proteins and senile plaques, dense extraneuronal deposits composed of amyloid A. The other features linked to these two core pathological hallmarks of AD are inflammation, oxidative stress, progressive synaptic and neuronal loss. In past years, some of the emerging therapeutic strategies against AD were employed to deal with the pathological hallmarks of the disease. Science teams all over the world try to restore the tau phosphorylation equilibrium. Their purpose is to interfere with the aggregation of tau and decrease its amount of proteins per se as well. Furthermore, they are trying either to stimulate the elimination processes of the aggregated tau proteins or to stop the formation of A peptides. This could be reached by the stimulation of the classic techniques of protein degradation such as the autophagic pathway or by the targeted immunotherapy. In this Research Topic, we wish to summarize and review the etiology of AD and the related therapeutic opportunities for the next decades. To fully understand the precise mechanisms underlying AD, research findings, reviews, new insights and new approaches include AD and related tauopathies, tau phosphorylation balance, pharmacological compounds against AD, neuroprotection strategies and new therapeutic ways but also risk factors for AD and AD genetic dementia has changed dramatically in recent years with the claim that through early detection and by controlling several risk factors a prevention of dementia is possible Although encouraging and providing hope against this feared condition this claim is open to scrutiny This volume looks at how this new conceptualization ignores many of the factors which influence a dementia sufferers prognosis including their history with education food and exercise as well as their living in different epistemic cultures The central aim is to question the concept of prevention and analyze its impact on aging people and aging societies

Biomarkers of Alzheimer's Disease: The Present and the Future Sylvain Lehmann,Charlotte Elisabeth Teunissen,2016-11-10 Alzheimer disease AD is a neurodegenerative disorder characterized by significant cognitive deficits behavioral changes sleep disorders and loss of functional autonomy AD represents the main cause of dementia and has become a major public health issue In addition the number of patients suffering from AD is growing rapidly as the population ages worldwide Memory impairment is usually the earliest clinical and core symptom of this disease The diagnosis at a late clinical stage is relatively easy However a delay in the diagnosis is damageable for the handling of patients in terms of optimal medical and social care The actual interest of the scientific head ways is to optimize the diagnosis in prodromal stage of the disease and to propose personalized therapeutic solutions to individual patients New revised AD diagnostic criteria include early alteration of cerebrospinal fluid CSF biomarkers decrease of amyloid peptides A β 42 and increase in tau and phosphorylated tau p tau protein concentration This recognition of CSF biological biomarkers for the diagnosis of AD is a major step towards the molecular diagnosis and follow up of the disease Many issues are however still subject of debate This e book provides a comprehensive overview of the state of the art of fluid biomarkers for AD e g which novel biomarkers should be implemented in clinical practice for diagnosis or for monitoring treatment or side effects which ones are new for AD or related dementias or what is the potential of peripheral blood markers Moreover the e Book provides practical guidelines how to optimally and efficiently develop and validate novel biomarker assays and to document and control pre analytical variation
