Falling for Therapy Anna Sands, 2000-08-14 If the aim of psychotherapy is to alleviate suffering then the measure of its validity must be the extent to which it does or does not achieve that goal But who decides whether suffering has been alleviated or whether the well being of the client has been promoted On what basis are such judgements made The majority of literature on the effectiveness of therapy is written by therapists This book written by a client challenges the power of theory and ask questions which deserve to be aired and in so doing presents a powerful and articulate appeal for greater sensitivity a critical view and better practice

The Crucible of Experience Daniel Burston, 2000-05-19 One of the great rebels of psychiatry R D Laing challenged prevailing models of madness and the nature and limits of psychiatric authority In this brief and lucid book Laing's widely praised biographer distills the essence of Laing's vision which was religious and philosophical as well as psychological The Crucible of Experience reveals Laing's philosophical debts to existentialism and phenomenology in his theories of madness and sanity family theory and family therapy Daniel Burston offers the first detailed account of Laing's practice as a therapist and of his relationships often contentious with his friends and sometime disciples Burston carefully differentiates between Laing and Laingians who were often clearer more confident and more simplistic than their teacher While he examines Laing's theories of madness Burston

focuses most provocatively on Laing's views of sanity and normality and on his recognition toward the end of his life of the essential place of holiness in human experience In a powerful last chapter Burston shows that Laing foresaw the present commercialization of medicine and asked pointed questions about what the meaning of sanity and the future of psychotherapy in such a world could be In this as in other matters Laing's questions of a generation ago remain questions for our time Emotions Kevin Sludds, 2009 In this study of emotions and moods the author discusses both analytic and continental traditions of philosophy He starts by examining critically the influential hybrid cognitive theory in particular William Lyons's causal evaluative theory describing its merits but also elucidating a number of fundamental defects that exist in this account He goes on to detail Martin Heidegger's description of mood in Being and Time as pre-cognitive and pre-moral defending it from those who attempt to attribute a cognitive dimension to it The book highlights the significance of connections or bonds in our affective lives at the ontic as well as ontological levels by examining three specific emotions grief guilt and objectless fear One of the study's principal achievements is the demonstration that there is much to be gained from both the analytic and continental traditions of philosophy in furthering our understanding of emotion and mood analysis In particular it shows how our understanding of guilt and objectless fear can be deepened when assessed in Heideggerian terms

Traumatic Incident Reduction (TIR) and Primary Resolution of the Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) Robert H. Moore, 2013-11-16 Traumatic Incident Reduction TIR and Primary Resolution of the Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder provides a brief discussion illuminating the concept of PTSD how it arises what maintains it how it progresses to increasingly constrain a person's life PTSD also involves faulty thinking but focus on such present time reactions is ineffective without addressing the original trauma PTSD is the consequence of attempts to avoid re-experiencing Traumatic Incident Reduction TIR is a technique for overcoming this tendency allowing the sufferer to experience the traumatic incident in a special safe way In the case of multiple traumas this can be complex needing to deal with each It is necessary to find the original trauma which invariably has led to more recent ones and fully resolve it in one sitting This provides complete relief from the burden of the past trauma An individual session designed to handle a single incident may take between 20 minutes and 3 hours average 1.5 hours The primary incident may be obvious to the sufferer or hidden People with anxiety problems but no flashbacks may find forgotten traumas the resolution of which through Thematic TIR can eliminate current symptoms Currently occurring emotional and somatic symptoms are traced back in time until a root incident is found Emotion and thinking are intertwined correcting one will correct the other TIR focuses on the emotion Once the trauma is fully processed the person is able to think rationally about it Dr Moore's monograph will guide you in deciding whether you will benefit from TIR and may inspire you to train to become a facilitator who can help others with this powerful family of techniques Bob Rich PhD www.anxietyanddepressionhelp.com R.
