Re Imagining Therapy Living Conversations And Relational Knowing:

Re-imagining Therapy Eero Riikonen, Gregory Madan Smith, 1997-05-06 Re imagining Therapy explores the benefits to therapeutic practice of paying attention to how people relate to and with language how ways of talking support different kinds of relationships and experiences The authors draw on social constructionist dialogic narrative and solution oriented approaches to argue that detachment and objectivity have impoverished our ways of understanding life and language They focus on words and language as tools gestures and actions through which therapy can work to build a sense of promise and trust

Deconstructing Psychotherapy Ian Parker, 1999-03-30 I enjoyed this book and think that it should find a grateful and attentive readership in the practical field as well as being a central text in academic settings It will also be well received by those like myself for whom the interest is more in deconstructing than psychotherapy Dialogues This book takes the discursive and postmodern turn in psychotherapy a significant step forward and will be of interest to all those working in mental health who are concerned with challenges to oppression and processes of emancipation It achieves this by reflecting on the role of psychotherapy in contemporary culture developing critiques of language in psychotherapy that unravel its claims to personal truth and the reworking of a place in the transformative therapeutic practice Deconstruction is brought to bear on the key conceptual and pragmatic issues that therapists and clinical psychologists face and the project of therapy is opened up to critical attention and reconstruction The book provides clear reviews of different viewpoints and will help readers to understand the complex terrain of debates

Transforming Emotion Glenda Fredman, 2004-02-13 Starting from the position that there is no universal story of emotion necessarily acceptable to all cultures and that we cannot assume a common language of emotion that accurately transfers meanings and experiences between people this volume approaches emotion as the story people weave of physical sensation display and judgements through multi layered contexts of their relationships and cultures Emotion stories are seen as intricately woven with stories of identity therefore having implications for how people perceive their moral worth Within a framework informed by communication theories social constructionism and systemic and narrative therapies Glenda Fredman offers a repertoire of possibilities to talk about feelings share understanding and transform emotion Using her personal stories transcripts of conversations and case vignettes to speak the theory she shows how paying careful attention to each person s emotional language rules and theories can avoid coercion undermining isolating or creating an impasse between the people involved mental health the use of these two approaches is growing with emergent implications for adults with mental health conditions their practitioners and or their families Divided into four parts Reconceptualising Mental Health and Illness Naming Labelling and Diagnosing The Discursive Practice of Psychiatry and Therapy and Interventions this Handbook provides a comprehensive overview of current debates regarding adult mental health

Medicalizing Counselling Tom Strong, 2017-09-18 This book discusses how counselling a profession known for diverse and innovative practices has recently been influenced by scientific marketplace and administrative developments corresponding with a medicalized focus on psychiatric diagnoses and related evidence based treatments Tensions associated with this medicalized focus refer to competing logics and accountabilities regarding how to understand and address concerns brought to counselling Tom Strong reviews such tensions as they relate to counsellors approaches to practice experienced as incompatible with a medicalized approach The role of media and technology therapy culture and counsellor education are examined with respect to medicalizing tensions that professionals and clients of counselling increasingly face The book will interest readers who share concerns regarding the potential for a mental health monoculture grounded in the diagnose and treatment logic of medicalized counselling

The Embodied Psychotherapist Robert Shaw, 2004-06-02 The therapist s body is a vital part of the therapeutic encounter yet there is an inherent inadequacy in current psychotherapeutic discourse to describe the bodily phenomena Until recently for instance the whole area of touch in psychotherapy has been given very little attention The Embodied Psychotherapist uses accounts of therapists own experiences to address this inadequacy in discourse and provides strategies for incorporating these feelings into therapeutic work with clients Drawing on these personal accounts it also discusses the experiences that can be communicated to the therapist during the encounter This description and exploration of how practitioners use their bodily feelings within the therapeutic encounter book will be valuable for all psychotherapists and counsellors

Self in Relationships Astri Johnsen, Rolf Sundet, Vigdis Wie Torsteinsson, 2018-04-24 Inspired by Daniel Stern's work on self development the authors suggest that by combining systemic therapy with a psychoanalytical aspect family therapy can reach new depths They argue that this will enrich our understanding of the relationships between parents and children and between siblings There have been changes within psychoanalysis and family therapy which we believe can enrich both these theoretical fields The idea is not to integrate but rather to bring about a mutual curiosity in these two areas which may result in dialogues with each other and create reservoirs for ideas and practices which have been found to be useful

Therapy Beyond Modernity Richard House, 2018-06-12 This book draws together radical critiques of therapy and shows how therapists have become too willing administrators of the mind and how they then delight in the bureaucratic management of therapeutic practice
