Gaining Voice Christopher J. Clark,2019-02-25 Scholars studying the causes and consequences of political representation particularly in terms of gender and race often turn to a concept called descriptive representation Descriptive representation tells us the degree to which elected officials resemble their constituents and whether such a resemblance has a bearing on the way they legislate In other words do people vote for candidates of their same racial ethnic background or gender If they do does this affect the type of policies an elected official pursues Further if citizens see people who look like them in office does it have an effect on their political attitudes and participation In this book Christopher J Clark argues that descriptive representation is a more multi faceted phenomenon than previously shown particularly when observed at the state level He contends that black political involvement political attitudes and public opinion are contingent on more than being represented by a single black elected official Rather they hinge on the proportion of African Americans making up a state legislature what Clark terms black seat share as well as the degree to which that proportion reflects the demographic makeup of the state As well Clark pinpoints the critical mass of African American legislators necessary to initiate the creation of black caucuses an important institution for minority representation Clark bases his study on an examination of black representation in state legislatures between 1966 and 2010 looking particularly at black political opinion and involvement in the development of welfare and education policy The Brevard Rosenwald School Betty J. Reed,2015-03-21 A century ago the Brevard Rosenwald School in

Transylvania County North Carolina opened its doors to African American students from the community and the surrounding area It was a microcosm of the community it served teachers and pupils lived on the same streets shopped in the same stores worshiped at the same churches and teachers and parents served on the same committees confronted similar social and economic problems and sought each other s advice about issues in daily life This book is a history of the school with special attention given to the years 1920 to 1966 and its attempts to improve the education of African Americans in the South It also focuses on the school's beginnings, development, significance to the community, closing, and the integration process and the Rosenwald community today. The author also presents narratives from former students about their experiences and educational goals, pursuits, and accomplishments at the school and later in their lives.
