Segmented Work Divided Workers The Historical Transformation Of Labor In The United States:

Segmented Work, Divided Workers David M. Gordon, Richard Edwards, Michael Reich, 1982-05-31 Segmented Work Divided Workers presents a restatement and expansion of the theory of labor segmentation by three of its founding scholars. The authors argue that divisions with the US working class are rooted in a segmentation of jobs since World War II. They explain the origins of job segmentation through a careful and systematic historical analysis of changes in the labor process and the structure of labor markets since the early 1800s; this analysis builds in turn upon hypotheses about successive stages in the history of capitalist development. Segmented Work Divided Workers integrates this economics analysis with a careful historical appreciation of the complexity of working class experience in the United States.

The Limits of Labour David Bright, 2011-11-01 In a few short decades before the First World War Calgary was transformed from a frontier outpost into a complex industrial metropolis. With industrialization there emerged a diverse and equally complex working class. David Bright explores the various levels of class formation and class identity in the city to argue that Calgary's reputation as a prewar centre of labour conservatism is in need of revision. Bright also delineates the trials of the Calgary labour movement in the 1920s. Internal divisions and dissent prevented the movement from realizing the potential strength of the working class. Instead even as local capitalism restructured itself political and industrial labour organizations wilfully fragmented their own base of support. In particular they failed to address the concerns and needs of the growing number of unemployed in the city, a neglect that foreshadowed events of the 1930s. This failure left the labour movement unable to meet the challenge of the Great Depression. In part at least the demise of labour as a viable political alternative in Calgary paved the way for the rise of Social Credit. Using Calgary as a model The Limits of Labour reasserts the need to place class formation at the heart of the development of western Canada and provides an historical context to the renewed struggle of labour for social justice in the 1990s.

Social Economics John Eatwell, Murray Milgate, Peter Newman, 1989-03-01 This is an excerpt from the 4 volume dictionary of economics, a reference book which aims to define the subject of economics today. 1300 subject entries in the complete work cover the broad themes of economic theory. This extract concentrates on social economics.

Proletarians of the North Zaragosa Vargas, 1999-03-02 Between the end of World War I and the Great Depression over 58 000 Mexicans journeyed to the Midwest in search of employment. Many found work in agriculture but thousands more joined the growing ranks of the industrial proletariat. Relating the experiences of Mexicans in the workplace and neighborhood and showing the roles of Mexican women, the Catholic Church and labor unions, Vargas enriches our knowledge of immigrant urban life.
