beyond a first enlistment costs hundreds of thousands of dollars Academic and other professional settings suffer similar losses when the wrong individuals are accepted into the wrong schools and programs or jobs and companies Picking the right people from the start is becoming increasingly important in today's economy and in response to the growing numbers of applicants Beyond cognitive tests of ability what other attributes should selectors be considering to know whether an individual has the talent and the capability to perform as well as the mental and psychological drive to succeed Measuring Human Capabilities An Agenda for Basic Research on the Assessment of Individual and Group Performance Potential for Military Accession examines promising emerging theoretical technological and statistical advances that could provide scientifically valid new approaches and measurement capabilities to assess human capability This report considers the basic research necessary to maximize the efficiency accuracy and effective use of human capability measures in the military's selection and initial occupational assignment process The research recommendations of Measuring Human Capabilities will identify ways to supplement the Army's enlisted soldier accession system with additional predictors of individual and collective performance Although the primary audience for this report is the U.S. military this book will be of interest to researchers of psychometrics personnel selection and testing team dynamics cognitive ability and measurement methods and technologies Professionals interested in the foundational science behind academic testing job selection and human resources management will also find this report of interest On the Witness Stand Hugo Munsterberg, 1927 Recent

,1928 Calendar University of Toronto,1881 A Closer Examination of Applicant Faking Behavior Richard L. Griffith,Mitchell H. Peterson,2006-05-01 The faking of personality tests in a selection context has been perceived as somewhat of a nuisance variable and largely ignored or glossed over by the academic literature Instead of examining the phenomenon many researchers have ignored its existence or trivialized the impact of faking on personality measurement The present volume is a much needed timely corrective to this attitude In a wide range of chapters representing different philosophical and empirical approaches the assembled authors demonstrate the courage to tackle this important and difficult topic head on as it deserves to be The writers of these chapters identify two critical concerns with faking First if people fake their responses to personality tests the resulting scores and the inferences drawn from them might become invalid For example people who fake their responses by describing themselves as diligent and prompt might earn better conscientiousness scores and therefore be hired for jobs requiring this trait that in fact they might not perform satisfactorily Second the dishonesty of the faker might itself be a problem separate from its effect on a particular score Someone who lies on a pre employment test might also lie about the hours he or she works or how much cash is in the till at the end of the shift Worse these two problems might exacerbate each other a dishonest applicant might get higher scores on the traits the employer desires through his or her lying whereas the compulsively honest applicant might get low scores as an ironic penalty for being honest Outcomes like these harm employers and applicants alike The more one delves into the complexities of faking as the authors of the chapters in this volume do so thoroughly and so well the more one will recognize that this seemingly specialized topic ties directly to more general issues in psychology One of these is test validity The bottom line question about any test score faked or not is whether it will predict the behaviors and outcomes that it is designed to predict As Johnson and Hogan point out in their chapter the behavior of someone faking a test is a subset of the behavior of the person in his or her entire life and the critical research question concerns the degree to which and manner in which behavior in one domain generalizes to behavior in other domains This observation illuminates the fact that the topic of faking is also a key part of understanding the relationship between personality and behavior The central goal of theoretical psychology is to understand why people do the things they do The central goal of applied psychology is to predict what someone will do in the future Both of these goals come together in the study of applicant faking The Mind's Web: Unraveling the Mysteries of Human Evolution Pasquale De Marco,2025-07-19 In the vast tapestry of life humans stand as a testament to the extraordinary power of evolution Our journey as a species has been marked by remarkable adaptations intricate social structures and an unparalleled capacity for innovation In this captivating book we embark on an intellectual odyssey to unravel the mysteries of human evolution exploring the depths of our psychology and uncovering the secrets of our behavior We begin our exploration by tracing the evolutionary path that led from our humble primate ancestors to the dominant species we are today We delve into the significance of bipedalism toolmaking and language in shaping our unique human
