

HOW SOLAR PANELS WORK

1. Before the sun hits the solar cell, an electric potential must be established. Adding phosphorus to the top layer of silicon gives it an overall positive charge, while adding boron to the bottom layer of silicon gives an overall negative charge.

2. When the sun's rays hit the silicon molecules from both layers, an electron is knocked loose.

3. Because opposite charges attract, these electrons are attracted to the top phosphorous layer and repelled from the bottom boron layer.

4. Electrons travel through the top layer to the metallic strips, which collect them and send them down a wire to provide power.

5. The electrons can then be sent back to the bottom metal backing of the solar cell. This returns the electrons, so the process can continue.

Solar cells alone can only make enough energy to run a calculator. To generate more power, they are often combined to form solar panels.

If even more power is needed, solar panels can be combined to create solar arrays.
