Exploring Political Ecology Alexander M. Ervin, 2024-08-30 This book explores some of the conditions and underlying causes of the multiple environmental crises facing humanity Rooted in anthropology but multidisciplinary in scope it surveys the many socio cultural and socio economic errors foibles and follies that brought us to these circumstances Crucially and uniquely it outlines an array of viable and practical solutions some of which are radically different from the current status quo and cultural expectations The first chapter canvasses the emerging interdisciplinary field of political ecology then Part I examines details and trends in agriculture Part II portrays the threats posed by carbon dependent and combusive technologies as well as the hydro and nuclear energy systems now powering the majority of human actions in developed parts of the world and expanding beyond The third part turns to consider solutions including green new deals de growth policies localization agroecology alternative energy systems and many more possibilities The conclusions engage with urgent moral and legal issues and outline social movement strategies all related to our collective neglect of climate change and then finally speculate upon possible futures This book is key reading for researchers and students interested in climate change across the social and physical sciences and humanities

Political Ecology of Agriculture Omar Felipe Giraldo, 2019-02-28 This study discusses an original proposal aimed at critically analyzing the power relations that exist in contemporary agriculture The author endeavors herein to clarify some of the strategies that industrial agribusiness in collusion with the state and multilateral structures sets in motion in order to functionalize the lives of millions of farmers so that their bodies enunciations and sensibilities can be repurposed in accordance with the dynamics of capital accumulation The argument is based on the idea that agro extractivism cannot be thought of exclusively as an economic political and technological system but as a complex interweaving of cultural meanings aesthetics and affections which amalgamated under the abstract name of development act as a support for the whole system s scaffolding The book also explores the other side of the coin describing how and under what conditions social movements are responding to the calamities generated by this model The central thesis is that many ongoing agroecological processes are providing one of the most interesting guidelines at present for visualizing transitions towards post development post extractivism and the construction of multiple worlds beyond the sphere of capital Political ecology of agriculture joins the calls that question the cultural project of modernity and the predatory sense imposed by the globalized food empire and invites recognition of the importance of agroecology in the context of the end of the fossil fuel era and the likely collapse of our industry based civilization

Remaking Sustainable Urbanism Xiaoling Zhang, 2019-02-25 This book analyses the implications of eco-urbanism re-making for policy and practice under the transformational trends of economic decentralization and market reform in China. While the guiding themes are space, scale and governance of cities, the book focuses on three interrelated prevailing processes of local green space reproduction, cross-scale mediation of eco-city planning ideology and mobilized social-economic-political intricacies among different countries. This book addresses the ongoing global diffusion and diversification of sustainable urbanism discourses, debates and practices to portray, evaluate, remake and implement a sustainable form of urban development using China as a national example. As eco-city practice becomes a city branding instrument worldwide, this new urban development vision is also well embraced by Chinese local governments. In these contexts, the Chinese government has initiated and endorsed a number of massive projects to promote green urbanism, steering urbanization onto a more sustainable trajectory. The construction of these ecotopias involves a multitude of processes ranging from policy transfer, mobility to institutional design, from innovation in green technologies to the promotion of green buildings and from policy implementation to public participation.
