Dialogue Editing for Motion Pictures Fellow in Human Resource Management John Purcell, John Purcell, 2012-11-12 Dialogue editing is a crucial yet invisible part of filmmaking Do it right and no one notices Do it wrong and your film or video sounds messy distracting and unrealistic This is a book for people who need to edit production sound for film TV or video but were never taught how to do it It goes step by step through the process and covers all the workflows you are likely to encounter Efficient working practices are emphasized throughout so you learn to save time and avoid needless repetition Many dialogue editors are hobbled by a lack of understanding of the non sound aspects of filmmaking Unlike editors who cut effects backgrounds or Foley a dialogue editor's work is directly affected by what has gone on before How a film was shot recorded and edited will dramatically influence the dialogue editing process Much of this book then deals with things which at first glance don't appear to be dialogue You will find overviews of film picture and sound postproduction film tape NTSC PAL 24p and HD There are summaries of film picture editing OMF manipulation and ADR management

Evaluation of Decision Making Performance on Three Pictorial Navigation Displays Marshall A. Narva, 1958 A group of pilots and a group of non pilots solved two representative types of navigation problems using three map type navigation displays representing different movement relationships between an aircraft symbol and a ground station symbol The three displays were as follows A aircraft movement display aircraft symbol translates in x and y and rotates in theta heading station symbol map is fixed B mixed movement display aircraft symbol fixed in position but rotates in theta station symbol map translates in x and y C earth movement display aircraft symbol is fixed station symbol map translates in x and y and rotates in theta to indicate change in position and heading The displays were presented by a static projection technique with the different movement relationships explained verbally to the subjects The two types of problems differed in the passage of a command track line either through or not through the position of the aircraft To solve each problem a directional decision and a heading decision had to be made A number of measures reflecting the speed and accuracy of these decisions were obtained For the non pilots there were no significant differences in performance attributable to the different movement relationships For the pilots a significant interaction between the displays and the problem types was obtained for two of the measures For the type of problem in which the command track line did not pass through the aircraft position the direction to turn decision was made significantly more rapidly with either the aircraft movement display or the mixed movement display than with the earth movement display For the same type of problem significantly fewer reversals were made on those problems with other than a south heading with the aircraft movement display than with the earth movement display As no significant difference in performance occurred between the aircraft movement and the mixed movement displays it is suggested that the mixed movement type of display be subjected to further study as this type of display has several operational advantages Abstract
