Figueroa, 2023-07-03 Latino males are effectively vanishing from the American higher education pipeline Even as the number of Latinas/os attending college has actually increased steadily over the last few decades the proportional representation of Latino males continues to slide relative to their Latina female counterparts The question of why Latino males are losing ground in accessing higher education relative to their peers is an important and complex one and it lies at the heart of this book There are several broad themes highlighted catalogued along with the four dimensions of policy theory research and practice The contributors to this book present new research on factors that inhibit or promote Latino success in both four year institutions and community colleges in order to inform both policy and practice They explore the social cultural factors peer dynamics and labor force demands that may be perpetuating the growing gender gap and consider what lessons can be learned from research on the success of Latinas This book also closely examines key practices that enable first generation Latino male undergraduates to succeed which may seem counterintuitive to institutional expectations and preconceived notions of student behavior Using narrative data the book also explores the role of family in persistence outlines how Latino men conceptualize fulfilling expectations negotiate the emasculation of the educational process and how they confront racialization in the pursuit of a higher education uncovers attitudes to help seeking that are detrimental to their success and analyzes how those who succeed and progress in college apply their social capital whether aspirational navigational social linguistic familial or resistant While uncovering the lack of awareness at all levels of our colleges and universities about the depth and severity of the challenges facing Latino males this book provides the foundation for rethinking policy challenges leaders to institutionalize male focused programs and services and presents data to inform needed changes in practice for outreach and retention

The Environment for Women's Entrepreneurship in the Middle East and North Africa Nadereh Chamlou, Leora Klapper, Silvia Muzi, 2008 The commonly held perception is that businesses owned by women in the Middle East and North Africa are small and informal that they are less sophisticated and that they are huddled in low value added sectors In fact as The Environment for Women's Entrepreneurship in the Middle East and North Africa shows there is very little difference between male and female owned firms Female owned firms in the region are as well established productive technologically savvy and connected to global markets as male owned firms Although there are many similar characteristics and performance levels between male and female owned firms in the region the book notes that women's entrepreneurship isn't reaching its potential despite an investment climate that is much less gendered than suspected With a significant increase in women's education level in 11 out of 18 countries in the region women outnumber men in universities and the strong economic rights women have in Islam women's entrepreneurship can become a far greater engine for growth and diversification than expected in the past This potential needs to be exploited vigorously Reforming the investment climate to benefit all players is one important action The second would be to remove or mitigate hurdles to their economic and social empowerment
