Examines the meaning of Jewish politics in Israel In one of the first books to ask head on what it means for Israel to be a Jewish state Yaacov Yadgar delves into what the designation Jewish amounts to in the context of the sovereign nation state and what it means for the politics of the state to be identified as Jewish The volume interrogates the tension between the notion of Israel as a Jewish state one whose very character is informed by Judaism and the notion of Israel as a state of the Jews with the sole criterion the maintenance of a demographically Jewish majority whatever the character of that majority s Jewishness might or might not be The volume also examines Zionism s relationship to Judaism It provocatively questions whether the Christian notion of supersessionism the idea that the Christian Church has superseded the nation of Israel in

God's eyes and that Christians are now the true People of God may now be applied to Zionism with Zionism understood by some to have taken over the place of traditional Judaism rendering the actual Jewish religion superfluous To Be a Jewish State deeply informs the democratic crisis in Israel discussing whether Jewish laws put into effect by the state or political moves made to ensure a Jewish majority can be seen as undermining democracy In our current era with nationalism resurging To Be a Jewish State urges a critical re assessment of the very meaning of modern Jewish identity

Reading Arab Women's Autobiographies Nawar Al-Hassan Golley, 2010-01-01 Authors of autobiographies are always engaged in creating a self to present to their readers This process of self creation raises a number of intriguing questions why and how does anyone choose to present herself or himself in an autobiography Do women and men represent themselves in different ways and if so why How do differences in culture affect the writing of autobiography in various parts of the world This book tackles these questions through a close examination of Arab women's autobiographical writings Nawar Al Hassan Golley applies a variety of western critical theories including Marxism colonial discourse feminism and narrative theory to the autobiographies of Huda Shaarawi Fadwa Tuqan Nawal el Saadawi and others to demonstrate what these critical methodologies can reveal about Arab women's writing At the same time she also interrogates these theories against the chosen texts to see how adequate or appropriate these models are for analyzing texts from other cultures This two fold investigation sheds important new light on how the writers or editors of Arab women's autobiographies have written documented presented and organized their texts
