Visual Merchandising Louisa Iarocci, 2017-07-05 Situated at the crossroads of visual culture and consumerism this essay collection examines visual merchandising as both a business and an art It seeks to challenge that scholarly ambivalence that often celebrates the spectacle but denies the agenda of consumerism The volume considers strategies in the imaging of selling from the mid nineteenth century to the present in terms of the visual interaction that occurs between the commodity and the consumer and between body and space Under the categories of Promotion Product and Place contributors to the volume examine the strategies in the presentation of retail goods and environments that range from print advertising to product design to store display and architecture Visual Merchandising The Image of Selling is located directly at the nexus of business practice and cultural myth where the spectator never loses sight of their status as buyer and the object of desire is always still a commodity Architectures of Display Anca I. Lasc, Patricia Lara-Betancourt, Margaret Maile Petty, 2017-09-11

Through an international range of case studies from the 1870s to the present this volume analyzes strategies of display in department stores and modern retail spaces Established scholars and emerging researchers working within a range of disciplinary contexts and historiographical traditions shed light on what constitutes modern retail and the ways in which interior designers architects and artists have built or transformed their practice in response to the commercial context

Boutiques and Other Retail Spaces David Vernet, Leontine de Wit, 2007-08-17 Presenting a critical and theoretical dimension to retail design Boutiques and Other Retail Spaces links the ideas behind it to real practice in this innovative and important contribution to architectural interior theory literature Retail structure has been subject to a dramatic and ongoing transformation over the past thirty years materializing in the emergence of large scale out of town shopping centres and new specialized shops in city centres These specialized boutiques are highly designed involving well known architectural firms such as OMA Rem Koolhaas David Chipperfield Herzog de Meuron amongst others With case studies and over 100 black and white images Vernet and de Wit set forth original and well grounded theory to accompany this popular and lucrative area of work

Practice of Consumption and Spaces for Goods Francesca Murialdo, 2013-04-17 The change in the significance of goods is a process which has triggered far reaching changes in society as the term has lost any meaning in relation to its purely functional character and increasingly come to represent symbolic and cultural contents The practice of consumption seems today to be one of the distinctive features by means of which we can describe the social political and economic phenomenologies which for better or worse influence our lives What becomes increasingly evident and necessary is the role of design culture as a structure for the coordination of the networks of knowledge to interpret the world of things and design in order to influence behaviours in the final analysis bringing about the rise of new economies The practice of consumption and the spaces for goods are in continuous evolution constantly eluding typological and functional definition One of the objectives of this research besides an attempt to explore not only the spaces but also the practices of consumption from the designer's perspective is to understand what mechanisms are at work what competences the roles which have impacted on still impact on today and will continue to impact on this sector in the future

century saw rapid growth in consumption and the expansion of retailing and services. This was reflected in the number and type of stores and locations from regional shopping malls and out of town superstores to concept and flagship stores. Retail design became an essential part of its success by creating distinctive brands and formats. However, the economic recession in the developed world and competition for consumer goods from the developing world has led to a re-assessment of the growth led conventions of the retail industry. In addition, the rapid advance of e-commerce and online shopping has created new challenges for physical stores and the communication and distribution of retail brands. The book will provide students, researchers, and practitioners a detailed assessment of retail design taking a distinctive global approach to place design practice and theory in context. Chapters are devoted to key issues in the visual and structural contribution of design to retail brands and format development and to the role of design in communication. In the course of the book, the authors engage with problems of convergence between retailing and other services and between the physical and virtual worlds and also changing patterns of use, re-use, and ownership of retail spaces and buildings. Retail Design concerns designers and organisations but also defines its broader contribution to society, culture, and economy.

The Professionalization of Window Display in Britain, 1919-1939 Kerry Meakin, 2024-09-05. This book provides the first comprehensive history of window display as a practice and profession in Britain during the dynamic period of 1919 to 1939. In recent decades, the disciplines of retail history, business history, design, and cultural history have contributed to the study of department stores and other types of shops. However, these studies have only made passing references to window display and its role in retail society and culture. Kerry Meakin investigates the conditions that enabled window display to become a professional practice during the interwar period, exploring the shift in display styles, developments within education and training, and the international influence on methods and techniques. Piecing together the evidence, visual and written, about people, events, organisations, exhibitions, and debates, Meakin provides a critical examination of this vital period of design history, highlighting major display designers and artists. The book reveals the modernist aesthetic developments that influenced high street displays and how they introduced passers-by to modern art movements.
