At the Illinois Mathematics and Science Academy, one of our main objectives in teaching foreign languages is for students to engage, on a deep, intellectual, and personal level, in new ways of seeing, thinking, interacting, and communicating. In order for this objective to be realized, students must encounter a communicative system and cultural perspectives different from their own. It is essential for our students' growth that they engage in immersion-based learning experiences where they are supported in going beyond normal comfort levels, and where they learn to function within a system that is unfamiliar to them, thereby developing real-world proficiency in another language and in other cultures.

As a result of language learning, our students think and act globally, are cosmopolitan in their outlook, and international in their understanding. They will be ethical leaders who advance the human condition. When students speak another language, they think and act differently. Their perspective is widened and horizons are expanded. Students have a greater capacity to empathize, to make friends, to imagine "it would be like" to be in

Eastern Europe Randall Stone answers these questions and others that have long vexed Western political scientists Stone argues that trade politics revolved around the incentives created by distorted prices The East European satellites profited by trading on the margin between prices on the Western market and those in the Soviet bloc The Soviet Union made numerous attempts to reduce its implicit trade subsidy and increase the efficiency of the bloc but the satellites managed consistently to outmaneuver Soviet negotiators Stone demonstrates how the East Europeans artfully resisted Soviet objectives Stone draws upon recent developments in bargaining and principal agent theory arguing that the incentives created by domestic institutions weakened Soviet bargaining strategies In effect he suggests perverse incentive structures in the Soviet economy were exported into Soviet foreign policy Furthermore Stone argues incentives to smother information were so deeply entrenched that they frustrated numerous attempts to reform Soviet institutions Energy Research Abstracts ,1992
