Self And Future Generations An Intercultural Conversation Between East And West:

Self and Future Generations T'ae-ch'ang Kim, Ross Harrison, 1999 This study reveals how human attitudes to the long term effects of their actions are crucially bound up with their ideas of personal identity This collection of essays contrasts eastern and western philosophies of concern for the future and offers some suggestions for their possible reconciliation

Living for the Future Rachel Muers, 2011-10-27 Our relationship to future generations raises fundamental issues for ethical thought to which a Christian theological response is both possible and significant A relationship to future generations is implicitly central to many of today's most public controversies over environmental protection genetic research and the purpose of education to name but a few but it has received little explicit or extended consideration In Living for the Future Rachel Muers argues and seeks to demonstrate that to consider future generations as ethically significant is not simply to extend an existing ethical framework but to rethink how ethics is done Doing intergenerationally responsible theology and ethics means paying attention to how people are formed as theological and ethical reasoners about the good how social practices of deliberation about the good are maintained and developed and how all of this relates to an understanding of the world as the sphere of God's transforming action In other words an intergenerationally responsible theological ethics will pay attention to the ethics and the spirituality of ethics itself Her account of the ethical relation to future generations centres on three key concepts choosing life see Deut 30 19 keeping the sources open and sustaining fruitful contexts These concepts are developed theologically and in engagement with extra theological conversations on intergenerational responsibility She shows how they take up and move beyond concerns expressed in those conversations for survival for the right distribution of resources and for the maintenance of human values

The Non-Identity Problem and the Ethics of Future People David Boonin, 2014-10-16 David Boonin presents a new account of the non identity problem a puzzle about our obligations to people who do not yet exist Our actions sometimes have an effect not only on the quality of life that people will enjoy in the future but on which particular people will exist in the future to enjoy it In cases where this is so the combination of certain assumptions that most people seem to accept can yield conclusions that most people seem to reject The non identity problem has important implications both for ethical theory and for a number of topics in applied ethics including controversial issues in bioethics environmental ethics and disability ethics It has been the subject of a great deal of discussion for nearly four decades but this is the first book length study devoted exclusively to its examination Boonin begins by explaining what the problem is why the problem matters and what criteria a solution to the problem must satisfy in order to count as a successful one He then provides a critical survey of the solutions to the problem that have thus far been proposed in the sizeable literature that the problem has generated and concludes by developing and defending an unorthodox alternative solution one that differs fundamentally from virtually every other available approach
