Making the Human Mind R. A. Sharpe, 2002-11-01 Making the Human Mind is an attack on the widespread assumption that the mind has parts and that it is the interaction between these parts which accounts for some of the most characteristic human behaviour the sorts of irrational behaviour displayed in self deception and weakness of will The implications of this attack are considerable Professor Sharpe contests a realism about the mind the belief that there is an inventory which an all seeing deity could compile and which could contain answers to all the questions we could ask about people With this goes a hermeneutic approach to the understanding of human behaviour these forms of understanding are markedly different from that suggested by the scientific model and favoured by those who partition the mind Finally the author undermines eliminative materialism and the idea that the way we talk about the mind constitutes a folk psychology arguing that what is distinctively human about the human mind has been created by self consciousness and is self created

Making Constituencies Lisa Jane Disch, 2021-11-12 Public division is not new in fact it is the lifeblood of politics and political representatives have constructed divisions throughout history to mobilize constituencies Since the turn of the twenty first century the idea of a divided United States has become commonplace In the wake of the 2020 election some commentators warned that the American public was the most divided it has been since the Civil War Political scientists political theorists and public intellectuals have suggested that uninformed misinformed and disinformed voters are at the root of this division Some are simply unwilling to accept facts or science which makes them easy targets for elite manipulation It also creates a grass roots political culture that discourages cross partisan collaboration in Washington Yet manipulation of voters is not as grave a threat to democracy in America as many scholars and pundits make it out to be The greater threat comes from a picture that partisans use to rally their supporters that of an America sorted into opposing camps so deeply rooted that they cannot be shaken loose and remade Making Constituencies proposes a new theory of representation as mobilization to argue that divisions like these are not inherent in society but created and political representatives of all kinds forge and deploy them to cultivate constituencies

Social Emergence in International Relations Maren Wagner, 2016-10-03 This book presents a conceptualization of social emergence in international relations as a novel angle to analyse institutional dynamics in East Asia introducing the concept of emergence from a critical realist perspective The author examines East Asia s characteristic mesh work of regional institutions that affect integrative processes and regional policies exploring how such institutions emerge and acquire their own nature and why this pattern persists over time an unresolved and contested subject in the field of International Relations This book suggests that regional institutions are emergent entities of the international system that arise as forms of self organization by states to achieve certain emergent properties and powers The author s approach sheds light on the particular emergent properties and powers of regional institutions and identifies discourse as a key mechanism of social emergence Besides engaging in relevant questions of the philosophy of science and its methodological implications for studying social emergence in world politics the book also analyses the concrete case of two East Asian regional institutions ASEAN Plus Three and the East Asia Summit This book will engage scholars and postgraduate students of Asian Studies and International Relations
