Holstein, Gale Miller, 2024-11-01 The social constructionist perspective has revolutionized the way that social scientists investigate social problems Constructing Social Problems Spector and Kitsuse 1977 2001 offered the guiding statement of the approach which both transformed and revitalized the sociology of social problems propelling it into a quarter century of exciting and innovative empirical research John Kitsuse and Malcolm Spector challenged conventional approaches to the field they insisted on treating social problems as social constructions as the products of claims making and constitutive definitional processes The purpose of this book is to highlight contemporary challenges to the social constructionist perspective on social problems In 1993 two collections of essays Reconsidering Social Constructionism Debates in Social Problems Theory Holstein and Miller 1993 and Constructionist Controversies Issues in Social Problems Theory Miller and Holstein 1993 brought a wide variety of constructionist challenges into focus Challenges and Choices attempts to distill these debates and offers some compelling suggestions for how challenges may be met and where constructionist studies might proceed in the future While each of the essays in this volume deeply appreciates the constructionist approach each of them points to issues and choices that social constructionists must confront if the perspective is to continue to be a vital part of ongoing debates on social problems The essays critique previous constructionist formulations make suggestions for advancing expanding or diversifying the constructionist agenda and challenge the perspective to move in new directions They remind us that social constructionism is an ongoing not a finished product and the essays point to some of the choices available to social constructionists in moving their projects into new even uncharted territories James A Holstein and Gale Miller are professors in the Department of Social and Cultural Sciences at Marquette University

Social Problems Donileen Loseke, 2017-07-05 This collection of focused essays is directed at several levels of students of social problems It is accessible to the uninitiated who are not familiar with the constructionist literature and aimed at those who are not particularly interested in subtle theoretical and empirical issues of concern to academics studying social problems from constructionist perspectives Some readings focus on the construction of problems by scientists and other professionals others examine the work of social activists mass media and social service personnel Among the topics included are studies of social inequalities and individual deviance a comparison of the images of social problems in the United States with those in other countries and an examination of the importance of politics and power in constructing public images of social problems Constructionist perspectives have become the leading theoretical approach for sociology and allied fields in studying social problems Yet constructionists impact on the teaching of social problems has been far less dramatic Undergraduate courses on social problems are often subject to a theoretical barrage of eclectic perspectives Just as the first social problems textbooks did almost a century ago textbooks continue to present a series of unrelated chapters each devoted to a particular social problem Social Problems is an effort at systematic analysis rather than random thought on the subject Social Problems presents detailed case studies demonstrating how constructionist perspectives can actually be applied to understand particular social problems While these articles can be read alone the editors have organized these selections to correspond with the chapter topics in the second edition of Donileen Loseke's Thinking about Social Problems an accessible introduction to constructionist approaches At the same time some instructors who use this edited collection might wish to provide th

Qualitative Methods and Health Policy Research Elizabeth Murphy, 2017-07-05 Qualitative researchers have traditionally been cautious about claiming that their work was scientific The right on schools have exaggerated this caution into an outright rejection of science as a model for their work Science is for them outmoded an archaic form of consciousness surviving for a while yet in a degraded form Tyler 1986 200 Scientists assertions that they are in pursuit of truth simply camouflage their own lust for power There is no essential difference between truth and propaganda The authors acknowledge that the boundary between science and propaganda has often been breached and some distrust of scientific claims may be healthy They also question the claim that science creates disinterested and objective knowledge of an observer independent world without concluding that science is impossible The skeptics reservations about qualitative research are based on the deep rooted assumption among natural scientists and some social scientists that there is a world out there prior to and independent of their observations This world can be known objectively in the sense that all observers will if identically placed see it in exactly the same way If a suitable language were available they would also all produce identical descriptions From these observations they can work out the laws governing the world's operations The authors try to resolve these contrary claims by asserting that science is a procedural commitment It consists of openness to refutation a conscientious and systematic search for contradictory evidence and a readiness to subject one's preconceptions to critical examination The devotion to truth as a regulative ideal is an essential difference between science and propaganda This work is a unique and innovative defense of scientific method

television opens the newspaper goes to the cinema and assesses how punishment is performed in media culture investigating the regimes of penal representation and how they may contribute to a populist and punitive criminological imagination It places media discourse in prisons firmly within the arena of penal policy and public opinion suggesting that while Bad Girls The Shawshank Redemption internet jail cams advertising and debates about televising executions continue to ebb and flow in contemporary culture the persistence of this spectacle of punishment its contested meaning and its politics of representation demands investigation Alongside chapters addressing the construction of popular images of prison and the death penalty in television and film Captured by the Media also has contributions from prison reform groups and prison practitioners which discuss forms of media intervention in penal debate This book provides a highly readable exploration of media discourse on prisons and punishment and its relationship to public attitudes and government penal policy At the same time it engages with the cultural turn within criminology and offers an original contribution to discussion of the relationship between prison public and the state It will be essential reading for students in both media studies and criminology as well as practitioners and commentators in these fields

Killer Weed Susan C.

Boyd, Connie Carter, 2014-01-01 Since the late 1990s marijuana grow operations have been identified by media and others as a new and dangerous criminal activity of epidemic proportions With Killer Weed Susan C Boyd and Connie Carter use their analysis of fifteen years of newspaper coverage to show how consensus about the dangerous people and practices associated with marijuana cultivation was created and disseminated by numerous spokespeople including police RCMP and the media in Canada The authors focus on the context of media reports in Canada to show how claims about marijuana cultivation have intensified the perception that this activity poses significant dangers to public safety and thus is an appropriate target for Canada's war on drugs Boyd and Carter carefully show how the media draw on the same spokespeople to tell the same story again and again and how a limited number of messages has led to an expanding anti drug campaign that uses not only police but BC Hydro and local municipalities to crack down on drug production Going beyond the newspapers Killer Weed examines how legal political and civil initiatives that have emerged from the media narrative have troubling consequences for a shrinking Canadian civil society
