Environment, Space, Place: Volume 8, Issue 1 (Spring 2016) C. Patrick Heidkamp; Troy Paddock; Christine Petto, CONTENTS Victor COUNTED Making Sense of Place Attachment Towards a Holistic Understanding of People Place Relationships and Experiences ABSTRACT The article is an attempt to make sense of the different interdisciplinary perspectives associated with people's attachment to places with a view to construct a holistic template for understanding people-place relationships and experiences We took note of the theoretical contributions of Jorgensen a theory of evolved tastes such as that developed by Dennis Dutton and an aesthetics of evolving nature based on Carlson's positive aesthetics After exploring both theories I argue that while the two positions approach aesthetics from different directions they support similar aesthetic judgments concerning landscapes and this suggests that the two positions might be incorporated into a broader theory of evolutionary aesthetics That theory is briefly outlined and applied to both natural landscapes and parks

Jeffrey B WEBB Watershed Redesign in the Upper Wabash River Drainage Area 1870 1970 ABSTRACT The Huntington Salamonie and Mississinewa reservoirs in northern Indiana control seasonal flooding in the Upper Wabash River drainage area They appeared in the 1960s after a long period of study and planning in response to large scale flooding in central and southern Indiana in the first half of the twentieth century Their construction disrupted the pattern of human ecology along the Wabash and its tributaries for many of the watershed's inhabitants Supporters touted the projects economic and recreational benefits while opponents experienced the change as a desecration of sacred space The projects saved millions in property damage and perhaps many human lives but at the cost of an enduring sense of place amid the advent of a new regime of scientific watershed management and state control over natural resources in the region

Winnie L M YEE Fashion Affect and Poetry in a Global City ABSTRACT Everyday life is a central theme of Hong Kong poetry Many Hong Kong poets use the quotidian as a starting point for the exploration of history and alternative imaginings This mundane focus unlike the colonial dreamscape of Hong Kong as an economic miracle allows writers to reflect upon Hong Kong as a post colonial and global space The Hong Kong writer Natalia Chan examines the complex nature of everyday life within the space of the global and post colonial city Chan's poems deal with the essence of everydayness and use commodities to conjure up the vivacity of the urbanscape of Hong Kong Unlike the political and economic discourse that is usually used to define Hong Kong Chan's work portrays Hong Kong as a city that offers the possibility of daily re-creation against the background of history In this article we will examine Chan's use of the circulation of commodities in the global world and explore the way fashion becomes a point where high and popular culture private and public domains and local and global interests clash negotiate and fertilize each other Chan's works do not conform to the economic and prosperity discourse that has repressed Hong Kong rather she guides her readers to re-experience the everydayness of routines to celebrate alternate ways of understanding the urbanscape and to open themselves to the potentialities of art and the everyday

Housing, Culture, and Design Setha M. Low,Erve Chambers,2016-11-11 This book originates in two symposia held during 1985 at the annual meetings of the Society for Applied Anthropology and the Environmental Design Research Association Integrating the Inner City Robert J. Chaskin,Mark L. Joseph,2015-11-13 For many years Chicago's looming large scale housing projects defined the city and their demolition and redevelopment via the Chicago Housing Authority's Plan for Transformation has been perhaps the most startling change in the city's urban landscape in the last twenty years The Plan which reflects a broader policy effort to remake public housing in cities across the country seeks to deconcentrate poverty by transforming high poverty public housing complexes into mixed income developments and thereby integrating once isolated public housing residents into the social and economic fabric of the city But is the Plan an ambitious example of urban regeneration or a not so veiled effort at gentrification In the most thorough examination of mixed income public housing redevelopment to date Robert J Chaskin and Mark L Joseph draw on five years of field research in depth interviews and volumes of data to demonstrate that while considerable progress has been made in transforming the complexes physically the integrationist goals of the policy have not been met They provide a highly textured investigation into what it takes to design finance build and populate a mixed income development and they illuminate the many challenges and limitations of the policy as a solution to urban poverty Timely and relevant Chaskin and Joseph s findings raise concerns about the increased privatization of housing for the poor while providing a wide range of recommendations for a better way forward      Sociological Human Ecology Michael

Micklin,Harvey M Choldin,2019-09-18 First published in This volume grew out of concerns raised by the contributors and a few others over the current status of human ecology within the field of sociology Stemming from conferences and subsequent discussions by a group of sociologist demographers on recent developments in sociological human ecology which started at the annual meeting of the Population Association of America in 1976 the original essays contained in this book are designed to review and assess the current state of knowledge in the field      Ghetto Mitchell Duneier,2016-04-19 A stunningly detailed and timely account of the idea of the ghetto from its origins in sixteenth century Venice and its revival by the Nazis to the present Khalil Gibran Muhammad The New York Times Book Review In Ghetto Mitchell Duneier shows how the entanglements of race poverty and place in America are connected to the ghettos of Europe He traces the evolution of the ghetto as both concept and reality through the stories of scholars and activists who attempted to understand the problems of American cities Using new and forgotten sources Duneier introduces Horace Cayton and St Clair Drake graduate students whose conception of the South Side of Chicago established a new paradigm for thinking about Northern racism and poverty in the 1940s He also discusses the psychological links between slum conditions and black powerlessness the controversy over Daniel Patrick Moynihan s report on the black family and how the debate about urban America changed as middle class African Americans started escaping the ghettos In this sweeping and incisive study Duneier offers a clear eyed assessment of the thinkers and doers who have shaped American ideas about urban poverty and the ghetto The result is a valuable new estimation of an age old concept A New York Times Notable Book Winner of the Z calo Public Square Book Prize      Housing and Planning References ,1977      Segregation James H.
