Ecophysiology of Desert Arthropods and Reptiles John L. Cloudsley-Thompson, 2012-12-06 Ecophysiology of Desert Arthropods and Reptiles starts with a new classification of the world's deserts based upon the type of precipitation and the effect on their faunas of arthropods and reptiles. This is followed by an account of microclimates and the avoidance of environmental extremes. Whereas thermoregulation is primarily behavioural responses to water shortage are largely physiological. Seasonal activity and phenology are described adaptations for burrowing the avoidance of enemies and defence are also outlined. A comparative account of interspecific relationships feeding specializations and species diversity in the two taxa is described. The purpose of the book is to provide a new and up to date analysis that will stimulate further research along these lines.

Climate and Man United States. Department of Agriculture, 1941 Mountains & Man Larry W. Price, 1981 This book explores the complex processes and features of mountain environments glaciers snow and avalanches landforms weather and climate vegetation soils and wildlife. A major section analyzes the effects of latitudinal position on these processes and features. There is also an investigation of the origin of mountains our attitudes towards them and their manifold implications for us. Inside front jacket Desert Development Yehuda Gradus, 2012-12-06 The fact that approximately one third of the world's land mass is arid desert may be congenial for the camel and the cactus but not for people. Nevertheless well over half a billion people or 15% of the world's population live in arid desert areas. If the world's population were distributed evenly over the land surface we would expect to find about 30% of the population inhabiting arid desert areas. Does the fact that only 15% of the world's population live in an arid desert environment reflect the harshness of the environment? Or is it a testimony to the adaptability and ingenuity of mankind? Do we view the glass as half full? Or half empty? The contributors to Desert Development: Man and Technology in Sparselands adopt the position that the cup is half full and in fact could be filled much more. Indeed many arid desert zones do thrive with life and given appropriate technological development such areas could support even greater populations. While the dire Malthusian prediction that rapid world population growth exceeds the carrying capacity of existent resource systems has gained popularity typified by the 1972 Club of Rome book Limits to Growth there is a growing body of serious work which rejects such pessimistic depletion models in favor of models which are mildly optimistic.

Mammals of Africa Jonathan Kingdon, David Happold, Thomas Butynski, Michael Hoffmann, Meredith Happold, Jan Kalina, 2013-05-23 Mammals of Africa MoA is a series of six volumes which describes in detail every currently recognized species of African land mammal. This is the first time that such extensive coverage has ever been attempted and the volumes incorporate the very latest information and detailed discussion of the morphology, distribution, biology and evolution including reference to fossil and molecular data of Africa's mammals. With 1 160 species and 16 orders Africa has the greatest diversity and abundance of mammals in the world. The reasons for this and the mechanisms behind their evolution are given special attention in the series. Each volume follows the same format with detailed profiles of every species and higher taxa. The series includes some 660 colour illustrations by Jonathan Kingdon and his many drawings highlight details of morphology and behaviour of the species concerned. Diagrams, schematic details and line drawings of skulls and jaws are by Jonathan Kingdon and Meredith Happold. Every species also includes a detailed distribution map.
