

EXAMPLE OF A 3 POINT COMPLETED SHORT READING CONSTRUCTED RESPONSE RUBRIC

A Note about constructed responses: Constructed response answers are not written "in stone." There is no perfect way a student should respond. Look for the general intent of the prompt and student response and follow the rubric below as much as possible. Use your best judgment. Unlike DOM-1 questions where there is one right and wrong answer, constructed responses are more difficult to assess. Overall consistency of intent based on most of your student responses can guide you.

Quarter 1 CFA Constructed Response Answer Key

Standard RL.4.3: 3 Point Reading Constructed Response Rubric

Question #8 (prompt):

Describe Emily's actions at Ellis Island that led to her enjoying the museum. Use specific details from the text to support your answer.

Teacher Language and Scoring Notes:

Emily went from little enthusiasm for being at the museum to enjoying her visit there, so much so she got lost from her family (sufficient evidence). With a grumpy attitude, her father let her go on her own. With this, "Emily felt her chest loosen slightly...Now that she was by herself, Ellis Island didn't feel so bad." (details to support the prompt). "The sign said "Family Records," and it made something stir inside Emily's brain," remembering her grandfather's stories of immigrating to the U.S. as a child. "She began navigating" and found exciting information about her grandfather. From there she became fascinated with searching for other people. "She was so engrossed that she forgot the time." In the end, she realized it was nice to get to Ellis Island.

3

The student gives a proficient response by providing evidence of how Emily's actions led to her enjoying the museum and uses specific details from the text to support each example.

In the story, Lost on Ellis Island, Emily actions showed that she liked going to Ellis Island. I know this because she was grumpy at first but in the end she said that it was nice. She also felt better being away from her family and exploring on her own. She was excited about what she found about her grandpa and others.

2

The student gives a proficient response by providing some evidence of how Emily's actions led to her enjoying the museum and some specific details from the text to support each example.

In the story, Emily enjoyed Ellis Island. She went off on her own in the museum. She went to the Family Records Room and found out information about her grandfather.

1

The student gives a minimal response by providing limited evidence of how Emily's actions led to her enjoying the museum with few specific details from the text.

Emily had fun at Ellis Island. She learned a lot about her grandpa.

0

The student provides no evidence of how Emily's actions led to her enjoying the museum.

Emily is a girl in the story about Ellis Island.

Standard RL.4.3

Describe in depth a character, setting, or event in a story or drama, drawing on specific details in the text (e.g., a character's thoughts, words, or actions).

Student-centered Classroom Assessment Richard J. Stiggins, 1994 Greetings to you and welcome! We are about to take a very important journey together, a journey through the diverse and critically important world of educational assessment. As you will see, both student achievement and academic self-concept are determined by and large on the basis of students' perceptions of their own success in the classroom. Students rely almost completely on the day-to-day, week-to-week and term-to-term classroom assessments of their achievement to judge their current success and their hope for success in the future.

Introduction to Ethnographic Research Kimberly Kirner, Jan Mills, 2019-09-05

Introduction to Ethnographic Research streamlines learning the process of research, speaks to the student at a foundational level, and helps the reader conquer the apprehensions of mastering research methods. Written in a conversational style, authors Kimberly Kirner and Jan Mills use a focus on scaffolding across the chapters to help the student transition from step to step in the research process. Case studies and first-hand accounts are also featured in each chapter, allowing the student to see the early steps, successes, and at times failures that accomplished researchers experienced in their past. These real examples further encourage the student that even the best researchers failed along the way and more importantly learned from those mistakes. This text is designed to be used as a stand-alone book but is enhanced by the use with the supplemental workbook Doing Ethnographic Research by the same authors. This text has callouts to the supplemental text which allow for application and practice of the material learned.
