Research in Social Psychology, Prevention Activities and Mental Health Promotion Sergio López García, José Enrique Moral-García, Manuel Joaquim Loureiro, Alba González-Palomares, Brais Ruibal-Lista, 2024-12-18 According to the latest recommendations of the World Health Organization regular physical activity is essential to combat sedentary lifestyles and other health problems Physical activity proper nutrition and proper rest are habits that must be adhered to by the entire population. There are many effects of physical exercise on a cognitive and mental health level. People with mood disorders tend to consume more toxic substances that in turn aggravate those problems. If it can be integrated into a routine, frequent exercise can be a way of organizing life in addition to obtaining physiological benefits such as less chronic inflammation or a segregation of substances that promote sleep. Also for those with social anxiety, physical exercise causes the release of endorphins which leads to an improvement in their mental health. Physical exercise can boost your self-esteem and give you a sense of accomplishment. Studies have shown that an increase in self-esteem is linked to better social interaction and healthier relationships.

Self-Esteem Roy F. Baumeister, 2013-11-11. Summarizing and integrating the major empirical research of the past twenty years, this volume presents a thorough review of the subject with a special focus on what sets people with low self-esteem apart from others. As the subject is central to the understanding of personality, mental health, and social adjustment, this work will be appreciated by professionals and advanced students in the fields of personality, social, clinical, and organizational psychology.

Self-Esteem, Friendship Support, and Depression in College Students Charles K. Roberts, 2014. Depression is an area of concern for college students. College students have higher rates of depression than non-college peers. Additionally, depression is related to multiple risk-taking behaviors and lower performance in school. This study examined the relationships between gender, friendship support, self-esteem, and depression ratings in a Midwestern college sample. Undergraduate psychology students completed multiple self-report inventories including the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale and the Multidimensional Scale of Perceived Social Support, and they provided information about the number of days they were depressed or their mental health was not good in the previous month. An additional model was run examining the relationships between the aforementioned variables and the number of days reported with mental health not good. While research shows that all three variables can affect depression in a college student population, the present study found that gender interacted with these measures. On the one hand, increased friendship support seemed to buffer males but especially females from depression. On the other hand, increased self-esteem buffered males from depression more than it buffered females. The additional model showed that self-esteem seems to work across genders to buffer college students from the experience of poor mental health days. Perhaps when looking to intervene in the lives of the students, universities would be able to tailor interventions based on gender so that they are able to foster increased friendship support for females and increase self-esteem for males, thereby reducing depression's impact on students.
