Rami Horowitz, Isaac Ishaaya, 2013-04-17 In the middle of the twentieth century new insecticides were being constantly developed and it seemed that pesticides would be able to control insect pests indefinitely In fact from the 1950s to the 1980s pest control was mostly based on conventional insecticides such as organochlorines organo phosphates carbamates and pyrethroids However the severe adverse effects of pesticides on the environment the resistance problems reaching crisis proportions and public protests led to stricter regulations and legislation aimed at reducing the use of pesticides Consequently other ways to manage insects have been suggested such as the use of biorational pesticides with minimal adverse effects on the environment biological control host plant resistance to pests mating disruption with pheromones and cultural and physical control The ideas behind integrated control were published at the end of the 1950s by groups of entomologists from California and served as a basis for initiating integrated pest management IPM in the 1970s Since the 1980s insecticide resistant management IRM programs have been introduced as a result of increasing problems of resistance to pesticides IPM programs were strengthened as the awareness of environmental fragility intensified Since the late 1990s advanced approaches to manage insect pests have been developed One of the novel and exciting innovations in the study of plant resistance to pests has been the introduction of genetically engineered or transgenic plants Effects of Agricultural Conservation Practices on Fish and Wildlife National Agricultural Library (U.S.), 2008 The bibliography is a guide to recent scientific literature covering effects of agricultural conservation practices on fish and wildlife The citations listed here provide information on how conservation programs and practices designed to improve fish and wildlife habitat as well as those intended for other purposes e.g. water quality improvement affect various aquatic and terrestrial fauna Abstract Integrated Management of Insect Pests on Canola and Other Brassica Oilseed Crops Gadi V P Reddy, 2017-04-26 This book comprehensively reviews current pest management practices and explores novel integrated pest management strategies in Brassica oilseed crops It is essential reading for pest management practitioners and researchers working on pest management in canola and other Brassica crops worldwide Canola, mustard, camelina and crambe are the most important oilseed crops in the world Canola is the second largest oilseed crop in the world providing 13% of the world's supply Seeds of these species commonly contain 40% or more oil and produce meals with 35 to 40% protein However its production has declined significantly in recent years due to insect pest problems The canola pest complexes are responsible for high insecticide applications on canola Many growers rely on calendar based spraying schedules for insecticide applications The diamondback moth Plutella xylostella and flea beetles Phyllotreta spp. P. cruciferae and P. striolata cause serious damage to canola In the Northern Great Plains USA for instance P. xylostella is now recorded everywhere that canola is grown Severe damage to canola plants can be caused by overwintering populations of flea beetles feeding on newly emerged seedlings Cabbage seed pod weevil Ceutorhynchus obstrictus, swede midge Contarinia nasturtii and tarnished plant bug Lygus lineolaris are also severe pests on canola Minor pests include aphids, cabbage aphid Brevicoryne brassicae and turnip aphid Hyadaphis erysimi and grasshopper Melanoplus sanguinipes The Biology of Agroecosystems Nicola Randall, Barbara Smith, 2020 This book provides a novel perspective on agroecosystems summarising our current understanding of the basic and applied aspects of these important and complex habitats whilst focusing on environmental concerns in the context of global change Toxicology Research Projects Directory, 1978

The Cumulative Book Index, 1990 A world list of books in the English language Fruit Fly Research and Development in Africa - Towards a Sustainable Management Strategy to Improve Horticulture Sunday Ekesi, Samira A. Mohamed, Marc De Meyer, 2016-12-01 Horticultural sector presents many opportunities for economic development and improving livelihood of growers but several factors constrain production and limit the potential for trade of fruits and vegetables Tephritid fruit flies constitute a major constraint They cause enormous losses through direct feeding damage and loss of market opportunities through imposition of quarantine restrictions by importing countries to prevent entry and their establishment In Africa several native Ceratitis and Dacus spp. and exotic Bactrocera and Zeugodacus spp. species inflict considerable losses to horticulture causing losses ranging from 30-90% Over the past 10 years of R coverage of African native species has been limited largely to Bactrocera oleae and Ceratitis capitata which are not economically important species in many Africa countries Indeed no book exist that have explicitly addressed economically important African fruit flies and none of the various reviews have specifically focused on the status of the bioecology economic impact and management of exotic and native fruit flies including several potentially invasive Dacus species attacking vegetables in Africa This book consolidates this status of knowledge and socio economic impact of various intervention techniques that are currently being applied across Africa The timing of the book is especially pertinent due to the changing fruit fly landscape in Africa caused by arrivals of the highly destructive alien invasives Bactrocera dorsalis B. zonata and B. latifrons and the priorities African countries have placed recently on export of fruits and vegetables to international markets This is an important reference material for researchers academics and students that are keen at improving horticulture and enhancing food and nutrition security in Africa and beyond
