Learning Theory in the Practice of Management Development Sara Grant, Aharon Kfir, Stephen A. Stumpf, Mary Anne Watson, 1998-05-21

The workplace is the ideal environment for tying together management theory and practice and yet classes in many regular management development programs are conducted away from the work site and class sizes are so large that individual instruction is difficult to achieve In this book the authors seek effective ways to merge theory with workplace practice and advocate the modular preceptor method whereby participants work together in dyads and triads with a preceptor acting as advisor and instructor Unlike traditional management development programs which do not usually lead to behavior changes the modular preceptor model has behavior change as the basic aim Participants can remain at work while experiencing individualized learning developing problem solving skills and acquiring new knowledge which can be immediately applied to work situations Various ways of learning such as passive lecture case study discussion and experiential role playing games sensitivity training are examined No single mode of learning can be comprehensive and adequate for all situations The authors contend however that experiential learning is most effective for increasing the will and competence to learn and for using what is learned to change manager behavior The purpose of the modular preceptor approach is not to present answers to specific managerial or organizational problems but to help the participant acquire new problem definition and problem solving skills and the confidence to apply them on the job This book also analyzes the contribution of the behavioral sciences to the philosophies and techniques behind management instruction and examines the role of the university in management development and the future direction of MBA programs For anyone concerned with meaningful and effective management development this book is an invaluable resource

Reflective Learning in Management, Development and Education David Higgins,2017-07-05 In recent years there has been a growing interest in the ideas surrounding reflective practice specifically in the areas of learning in management development and education This interest has developed in a growing number of professional fields thus making for very diverse understandings of what can be regarded as complex approaches to learning In order to understand how reflective practice can support and aid learning it is helpful to acknowledge how we learn First all learners start from their own position of knowledge and have their own set of experiences to draw upon Second learning is contextual something which managers need to acknowledge To make sense and achieve a deep understanding of material and experiences one needs to relate new information to existing knowledge and experiences This is best achieved through a process of reflection Indeed the underlying rationale for the chapters in this publication is to explore how the role of practice reflection and critical reflection are understood and developed within a learning process which is supported through the application of reflective tools This book recognises and makes explicit the diverse yet inclusive nature of the field By including a range of contributions from both subject specific disciplines and professional contexts it seeks to enable the reader in documenting some of the current uses of reflection and critical reflection while also illustrating some of the newer methods in use as well as the current contributions to thinking in the subject domain Through this publication the editor and authors hope to provide a basis from which continuing professional development and education can be enhanced This book was originally published as a special issue of Reflective Practice International and Multidisciplinary Perspectives

Management and Leadership Development Christopher Mabey, Tim Finch Lees, 2007-12-12 This is the first really thought provoking book that I have read on management development It is a book primarily addressed to students but in this field we are all students It merits a wide readership both among practising managers as well as among those responsible for developing them Max Boisot ESADE Mabey and Finch Lees inject a breath of fresh air into the management development field by expanding upon its heretofore functionalist base They offer an informative critique of mainstream views featuring alternative discourses to examine such hard questions as why management development hasn't quite delivered on management's considerable investment in it As a veritable tour de force in its absorbing integration and review of a large tract of literature the book informs both management scholars and practitioners what might be expected from management development's intended but also unanticipated outcomes Joe Raelin Northeastern University In a well written accessible and yet sophisticated text Mabey and Finch Lees show themselves to be as familiar with the latest in management development practice as they are with the sometimes arcane theoretical literature that surrounds it Its great strength is to recognize the plurality of discourses some overlapping and complementary others distinct and oppositional about the subject This book can be recommended as a unique resource for students and scholars of management development Chris Grey University of Warwick This book represents a significant step forward in the theory of management and leadership development It offers an international perspective in this era of globalisation and a new and questioning perspective on the common belief that leadership is something completely different to and more important than management This book will be of great help to the serious
