Managing Canal Irrigation:

Managing Canal Irrigation Robert Chambers, 1989-03-23 The many billions of dollars invested in canal irrigation in recent decades have had disappointing results Rarely have projected benefits in well being or production been achieved In consequence in the mid 1980s further vast sums are being spent throughout the Third World on programmes for rehabilitation canal lining on farm development and farmers organisation In this book Robert Chambers shows that much of this policy and practice is based on misleading research and misdiagnosis When applied to the complexity and uniqueness of canal irrigation systems the normal professionalism of civil and agricultural engineers agronomists economists and sociologists leaves gaps which are keys to better performance In successive chapters five such gaps are analysed and presented main system management including the scheduling and delivery of water and communications canal irrigation at night management of canal systems jointly by farmers and officials professional conditions and incentives for irrigation managers and methods for diagnostic analysis to identify cost effective actions for improvement Managing Canal Irrigation has been written for policy makers irrigation managers consultants researchers trainers and teachers It challenges all concerned with improving the performance and anti poverty impact of canal irrigation whether in government departments aid agencies consultancy firms training and research institutes or universities to re examine their beliefs biases and actions By going beyond the limits of normal professionalism the book presents a new syllabus for training a new agenda for research and development and points to new policies and to practical action to be taken in the field Managing Canal Irrigation in India Sib Ranjan Misra, 2000 This Book Attempts An Account Of The Status Of Water Distribution Issues Associated With Irrigation Projects Socio Economic And Environmental Consequences Of Maldistribution And People S Participation In Irrigation Projects Managing canal irrigation: Potential for the poor Robert Chambers, 1999

Institutional Change and Shared Management of Water Resources in Large Canal Systems D. J. Bandaragoda, 1999 This report is based on the results of an action research program in Pakistan conducted by the International Water Management Institute IWMI An analysis of empirical data is presented in the light of existing theoretical knowledge on collective action for natural resources management the report also highlights the current constraints associated with a wider application of some of these findings which reflect the difficulties in pursuing large scale institutional reforms in the rural sector of developing countries finally the report raises some key research issues that need to be explored further Revolutionizing

Development Andrea Cornwall, Ian Scoones, 2022-03-28 This book tells the story of development studies in practice over the last fifty years through the work of one remarkable individual Robert Chambers His work has taken him from being a colonial officer in Kenya through training and managing large rural development projects to a fundamental critique of top down development and the championing of participatory approaches The contributors eloquently demonstrate how he has been at the centre of major shifts in development thinking and practice over this period popularising terms that are now at the centre of the development lexicon such as vulnerability multi dimensional poverty sustainable livelihoods and farmer first Robert Chambers played a major role in the massive growth in participatory approaches to development and particularly the application of participatory methods in development research and appraisal This has led to fundamental challenges to development practice ranging from approaches to monitoring and evaluation to institutional learning and professional training There is probably no one who has had more influence on approaches to development in the past decades Revolutionizing Development offers a unique overview of these contributions in thirty two concise chapters from authors who have been intimately involved as collaborators critics and colleagues of Robert Chambers

Water Management, Food Security and Sustainable Agriculture in Developing Economies M. Dinesh Kumar, M. V. K. Sivamohan, Nitin Bassi, 2013 This book addresses strategies for food security and sustainable agriculture in developing economies The book focuses primarily on India a fast developing economy whose natural resource base comprising land and water supporting agricultural production is not only under enormous stress but also complex and not amenable to a uniform strategy It critically reviews issues which continue to dominate the debate on water management for agricultural and food production The book examines the validity of the claim that large water resources projects cause serious social and environmental damages using global and national datasets The authors examine claims that the future of Indian agriculture is in rain fed farming supported by small water harvesting They question whether water abundant eastern India could become the granary of India through a groundwater revolution with the right policy inputs In the process they look at the less researched aspect of the food security challenge which is land scarcity in eastern India The book analyzes the physical economic and social impacts of large scale adoption of micro irrigation systems using a farming system approach for north Gujarat Through an economic valuation of the multiple use benefits from tank systems in western Orissa it shows how value of water from large public irrigation systems could be enhanced The book also looks at the reasons for the limited success in bringing about the much needed institutional reforms in canal irrigation for securing higher productivity and equity using case studies of Gujarat Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra Finally it addresses how other countries in the developing world particularly Sub Saharan Africa could learn from Indian experience Rural Resource Management Mr. Rohit Manglik,2023-11-23 Studies sustainable use and planning of rural natural resources Reforming Institutions in Water Resource Management Lin Crase,Vasant P. Gandhi,2009-09-02 As water scarcities increase nations throughout the world are in search of better institutions to manage water resources India has been making substantial efforts to develop its water management systems since independence and significant increases in irrigated agriculture have taken place through both public and private initiatives However scarcities are increasing and major problems presently confront the management of water resources and irrigated agriculture Resolving these problems is crucial for the future The main purpose of this book is to provide a new approach for the analysis and design of water institutions that govern the use and development of water resources particularly for agriculture which is the largest user Drawing on the theory of New Institutional Economics and comparisons with Australia as a developed country and other less developed nations in Africa and Asia the authors present original empirical data from three Indian states Detailed analysis of these data is used to identify and recommend attributes and features of water management institutions that are conducive to effective resource management its long term success and its best contribution to development Environmental Management and Sustainability in India Abhay Sankar Sahu,Nilanjana Das Chatterjee,2023-07-25 This volume explores the spatial side of sustainability using cases from India It provides a variety of chapters from scholars from West Bengal and elsewhere in the country highlighting spatial perspectives on environmental issues and offering insight on sustainable development in the subcontinent from a geographical perspective A wide variety of topics are covered here including but not limited to mitigation of and adaptation to climate issues hydrogeomorphologic issues environmental management agricultural sustainability ecosystem services urban environmental management and tourism issues The lessons learned here are transferable to other contexts and the book is a resource for researchers academics practitioners government organizations NGOs and anyone else interested in the spatial side of sustainability Water Management in India P. C. Bansil,2004 Alleviating Poverty, Intensifying Agriculture, and Effectively Managing Natural Resources. Per Pinstrup-Andersen,Rajul Pandya-Lorch,1994-08-01 This discussion paper is the first in a series of papers prepared as part of IFPRI s 2020 Vision initiative which seeks to develop an international consensus on how to meet future world food needs while reducing poverty and protecting the environment It shows that poverty and environmental degradation in the developing world are inextricably linked with inadequate agricultural intensification Increased investment in agriculture and poverty alleviation are essential for preventing further resource degradation and for meeting future food needs in a sustainable manner River Basin Management in the Twenty-First Century Victor Roy Squires, Hugh Martin Milner, Katherine Anne Daniell, 2014-07-10 Worldwide development of agriculture and industry creates burgeoning demands on natural resources Management of the rivers and the surrounding landscape is one of the important tasks for today and for the foreseeable future Lessons learned from centuries of management and mismanagement have been distilled into principles and practices which form the subject matter for this book It provides both a global perspective and an entrance to the special problems associated with management of transboundary rivers

International Research on Natural Resource Management Hermann Waibel, David Zilberman, 2007-01-01 Over the past two decades significant investment has been made into agriculture related natural resource management research in developing countries This collection of case studies establishes a methodological foundation for impact assessments of NRMR through a discussion of research conducted by the CGIAR around the world Water resources management in Afghanistan: The issues and options Qureshi, A. S., This report presents the analysis of current status of water resources management in Afghanistan and identify steps for maximizing the use of available water resources to enhance crop productivity and environmental sustainability
