Passive euthanasia - Passive euthanasia has been recognized for decades. It simply involves withholding or withdrawing medical treatment from the hopelessly ill.

- ▶ Court cases have revolved around two issues in defining the physician's right to withhold or terminate treatment:
  - ▶ (1) the kind of medical care a terminally ill patient desires and,
  - ▶ (2) the requests of patients who want to die to have treatment withdrawn. Such requests assume that any treatment will only postpone the process of dying.
- ▶ In an effort to address these issues, court decisions have given physicians the right to honor living wills.
- ▶ A living will is a written, legal document that spells out medical treatments you would and would not want to be used to keep you alive, as well as other decisions such as pain management or organ donation. The living will may also state resuscitation orders (DNR). Thus, Living wills represent a means of extending self-determination to people no longer capable of participating in decisions about their care.
