Marriage And The Family And Child Rearing Practices:

Marriage and the Family and Child-Rearing Practices Sheila Corwin, 1981-01-01 International bibliography of research in marriage and the family Joan Aldous, 1967 Effects of Alevi-Sunni Marriages on Children's Religious Education and Family Relations Dr. Fatma Kurttekin, 2024-12-31 In this study the views of parents in Alevi Sunni marriages on the phenomenon of religion and their children's religious education are examined While there has been a growing body of research on the role and significance of religion in Alevi Sunni families limited attention has been paid to their attitudes towards their children's religious education particularly within the context of cross religious marriages Based on this this study aims to fill this research gap by examining the perspectives of parents in Alevi Sunni marriages on their children's religious education and family dynamics using qualitative methods to provide in depth insights Ten families living in Sivas Ankara and Tunceli who were contacted through snowball and purposive sampling participated in the study in which qualitative research techniques were used The data used in the study were collected through questionnaires and semi structured interview forms The data was analyzed with the content analysis It was determined that the Alevi Sunni difference did not have a significant impact on the participants religious attitudes or their children's religious education Almost all parents stated that they wanted their children to choose their own path by acquiring experience and knowledge about both religious interpretations understandings The study identified two primary areas of difficulty in Alevi Sunni families familial opposition to the participants decision to marry and conflicts surrounding the children's religious education These tensions may stem from societal pressures to conform to sectarian norms and the fear of losing religious identity through cross mixed intrafaith marriages Such pressures highlight the need for open dialogue and acceptance within families which many participants reported as key to resolving conflicts The provision of religious education in the family and the religious identity of children have been discussed in a separate study Therefore in this study participants views on compulsory religious education activities which are also a subject of debate in society were evaluated In parallel with the findings in the literature the participants opinions were grouped in three categories namely abolishing the courses making the courses optional and improving the courses along with preserving their compulsory status Following the interviews it was seen that the participants could have arguments mostly due to external factors and that their own religious understanding did not have any impact on family life religious attitudes or child rearing Attention was drawn to the need for freedom from prejudices acceptance of the other as he she is honesty trust and a communicative environment of dialogue in order to reduce the tension in these two areas Women, Family, and Child Care in India Susan Christine Seymour, 1999-01-28 Documents the lives of 24 families in India over almost thirty years Hearths of the Northeast: A Historical Voyage Pasquale De Marco, 2025-07-19 Journey into the rich tapestry of the Northeast's domestic history in Hearths of the Northeast A Historical Voyage This captivating book takes you on an immersive journey through the homes and lives of the region's inhabitants

How Do Families Cope With Chronic Illness? Robert E. Cole,David Reiss,2013-05-13 Because chronic disorder is becoming an ordinary feature of family life and development understanding its impact has become critical This volume and the conference proceedings it reports represents a major effort to examine the family s response to chronic physical or psychopathological illness in one or more of its members Recent data are revising our notions of chronic illness Evidence is mounting that chronic psychiatric disorders reflect in part abnormalities of brain structure and function In this sense they are in part medical disorders On the other hand a number of traditionally labeled medical disorders produce a broad range of psychological symptoms and are exquisitely sensitive to psychosocial influences Families undergo a complex process of adaptation during which their response to stress and their fundamental beliefs about learning and parenting change These beliefs endure and are difficult to alter By examining the processes in a wide range of chronic conditions this volume helps to identify the common underlying processes of adaptation The first three chapters concern the families responses to disorders that are distinctly medical the next three focus on families responses to grey zone disorders or anomalies that appear early in life minor physical anomalies and communication handicaps and one chapter focuses exclusively on schizophrenia The last chapter reflects an effort to develop a model based on the experience of researchers with both psychiatric and medical illness
