

MODERNIZATION AND POLITICAL CHANGE

The Latin American and Amer-European Nations

ARTHUR S. BANKS

ARTHUR S. BANKS is currently working on a multivariate analysis of cross-national time-series data under a grant from the National Science Foundation. He is Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for Comparative Political Research of the State University of New York at Binghamton. He is author (with Robert B. Textor) of A Cross-Polity Survey.

A DECADE has now passed since the publication of Seymour M. Lipset's (1969) seminal article, "Some Social Requisites of Democracy." As in the case of most such efforts to chart a new course in behavioral science, the article earned its author both praise and criticism—praise for what he was attempting to do, criticism (both conceptual and methodological) for the manner of its execution (see Cutright, 1963). The present paper reports on research that represents, in part, a return to Lipset's earlier terrain, namely, a comparison between the Latin American and Amer-European nations, as measured by longitudinal indices both political and "developmental" in character. The indicators upon which the present research is based differ, however, from those employed by Lipset. The political indicators were selected with reference to problems of change, rather than of legitimacy, while the remainder (a set of transportation and communications measures) relate to what may be termed technological modernization, rather than to Lipset's "economic development."¹ The principal purpose of the study is to assess the relative homogeneity of (hence the relative "distance" between) the two groups of nations, along the dimensions indicated, for a series of thirteen data points

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Research for this paper has been supported by the National Science Foundation under grant GS-2420.

Sigmund, 1970 Mexico the institutionalization of the revolution Bolivia the failure of the institutionalization of the revolution Cuba the revolution turns to communism Brazil The military vs the radical left Argentina the military vs peronism Venezuela the victory of constitutional democracy Colombia elite democracy in transformation Chile multiparty politics and democratic reform Strategic Choice Models of Political Change in Latin America David Collier, Deborah L. Norden, 2016 The article assesses the use of strategic choice models in the study of Latin American politics These models explore how given actors pursue goals by shaping the context in which other actors make choices The discussion centers on Hirschman's analysis of reform mongering Przeworski's threshold model of transitions to democracy and O'Donnell's model of democratic consolidation Basic components of the models are examined including the definition of actors preference distributions coalitional thresholds perceptions of the likelihood of given outcomes and efforts to change actual and perceived costs of these outcomes The relationship between such models and more familiar perspectives in the Latin American field is then explored The models have a distinctive emphasis on uncertainty and the creative use of uncertainty by political leaders yet they also have much in common with other research traditions The article advocates eclecticism in employing these alternative analytic approaches

Market Economics and Political Change Juan D. Lindau, 2000-01-01 Does market liberalization promote democracy The accepted answer from scholars pundits and politicians alike has been yes However the contributors to this innovative study of market reforms and political change in Mexico and the People's Republic of China argue that this easy equation is not only empirically uncertain but methodologically flawed Using comparative contextual analysis the contributors carefully identify the elective affinities between these two very different polities to reveal key variables that determine how markets will affect democracy particularly law as the rudder of democracy and the role of political culture in civil society

Political Change in the Third World Charles Andrain, 2012-07-26 In this informative and highly readable book first published in 1988 Charles Andrain explores the ways in which public policies and socio-political beliefs and structures cause political change in the Third World The author examines 3 types of political change 1 transitions in political leaders and their policies 2 fundamental transformations in political structures policy priorities and political strategies for dealing with policy issues and 3 the impact of economic education and health care policies on the society itself including changes in unemployment inflation economic growth literacy and birth and death rates In the first part of the book Professor Andrain presents a general overview of political change in the Third World explaining how different models of political systems explain the dynamics of political events in Latin America Asia Africa and the Middle East In the second part of the book he then applies these models to specific changes in five developing nations Vietnam Cuba Chile Nigeria and Iran The book is unique in its careful blending of a policy focus with a structural analysis of nation states domestic social groups and international institutions in the often turbulent regions of the developing world It thus provides a very useful systematic approach to political developments in the Third World that will be welcomed by students faculty and general readers A
