Modern German Novel A Mid Twentieth Cent:

The Modern German Novel H. M. Waidson, 1960 The Modern German Novel Herbert M. Waidson, 1959 The Modern German Novel H. M. Waidson, 1959 The principal aim of the pages that follow is to give an account of prose fiction written in Germany between 1945 and 1957 The decade which has just passed has been a lively period in the production of novels and shorter stories in Central Europe moreover it draws together various phases of the German novel from earlier periods and allows us to examine works which while being freely open to external influences whether from England America Russia France or elsewhere at the same time have their own peculiar stamp From this contemporary writing we may legitimately deduce the existence of features which are peculiar to German fiction and ask where the special contribution of German novelists lies and what their particular problems are p 1 The Cambridge Companion to the Modern German Novel Graham Bartram, 2004-04-05 The Cambridge Companion to the Modern German Novel first published in 2004 provides a broad ranging introduction to the major trends in the development of the German novel from the 1890s to the present Written by an international team of experts it encompasses both modernist and realist traditions and also includes a look back to the roots of the modern novel in the Bildungsroman of the late eighteenth and nineteenth centuries The structure is broadly chronological but thematically focused chapters examine topics such as gender anxiety images of the city war and women's writing within each chapter key works are selected for close attention Unique in its combination of breadth of coverage and detailed analysis of individual works and featuring a chronology and guides to further reading this Companion will be indispensable to students and teachers A Reference Guide for English Studies Michael J.
