

While no attempt has been made to furnish a "Text-book" in the narrower acceptance of the term, there will be found within the pages a far larger amount of practical information relative to the subject, included under the head of Joinery in the volumes of the seven remaining books in London that can be met with elsewhere. It is inevitable that some amongst the great number of illustrations presented resemble those that have already appeared in other works in which the subject is dealt with, but in no instance has either illustration or explanation been copied from other books: in every case the author has relied upon his own experience.

He also desires to acknowledge the very valuable assistance he has received from Mr. Sanford in the arrangement and preparation of the work for the press, and concludes with the earnest wish that his labours will prove of some little assistance to his brethren in the work of Isahrah.
