

ONE NIGHT WE SLEPT OUTSIDE

-Eliot S. Ku

I sent them the scenic way, where they will have to pass through a tunnel that narrows in some places to around 2 inches of breathing room on all sides.
And in another section, although not as tight, it is cluttered with dead bodies lying about in configurations that resemble Chinese characters.
It's long enough that they will have to spend one night in those claustrophobic quarters, enveloped by the velvety fragrance of decomposition, and surely, they will have doubts and think about turning back, but by noon the second day the tunnel shall open into a cave room and the cave room into a large mouth behind a waterfall surrounded on the other side by deciduous trees whose falling leaves are as diverse in shape and color as there are types of cookies in the world.
The autumn light will filter through, and the air will be so fresh.
I wonder then if they will still be upset with me once they have realized that I finally brought them to this place.
