Modern Wilderness:

Driven Wild Paul S. Sutter, 2009-11-23 In its infancy the movement to protect wilderness areas in the United States was motivated less by perceived threats from industrial and agricultural activities than by concern over the impacts of automobile owners seeking recreational opportunities in wild areas. Countless commercial and government purveyors vigorously promoted the mystique of travel to breathtakingly scenic places and roads and highways were built to facilitate such travel. By the early 1930s New Deal public works programs brought these trends to a startling crescendo. The dilemma faced by stewards of the nation's public lands was how to protect the wild qualities of those places while accommodating and often encouraging automobile-based tourism. By 1935 the founders of the Wilderness Society had become convinced of the impossibility of doing both. In Driven Wild Paul Sutter traces the intellectual and cultural roots of the modern wilderness movement from about 1910 through the 1930s with tightly drawn portraits of four Wilderness Society founders: Aldo Leopold, Robert Sterling Yard, Benton MacKaye, and Bob Marshall. Each man brought a different background and perspective to the advocacy for wilderness preservation, yet each was spurred by a fear of what growing numbers of automobiles, aggressive road building, and the meteoric increase in Americans turning to nature for their leisure would do to the country's wild places. As Sutter discovered, the founders of the Wilderness Society were driven wild, pushed by a rapidly changing country to construct a new preservationist ideal. Sutter demonstrates that the birth of the movement to protect wilderness areas reflected a growing belief among an important group of conservationists that the modern forces of capitalism, industrialism, urbanism, and mass consumer culture were gradually eroding not just the ecology of North America but crucial American values as well. For them, wilderness stood for something deeply sacred that was in danger of being lost, so that the movement to protect it was about saving not just wild nature but ourselves as well.

Wilderness Management John C. Hendee, George H. Stankey, Robert C. Lucas, 1978 Comprehensive synthesis of information organized under six main areas: the setting, legal basis for wilderness management, concepts and direction, important elements for management, wilderness use, and its management and problems and opportunities, all as they relate to the North American, principally U.S. scene.

Filming the Modern Middle East Lina Khatib, 2006-09-29 Filming the Modern Middle East is the first comparative investigation of how modern American cinema and the cinemas of the Arab world represent Middle Eastern politics to their audiences. Lina Khatib examines the cinematic depictions of major political issues from the Arab-Israeli conflict to the Gulf War to Islamic fundamentalism and covers films made in the USA, in Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Lebanon, Syria, and Palestine. She explores cinema's role as a tool of nationalism in the USA and the Arab world and the challenges the Arab cinemas present to Hollywood's dominant representations of Middle Eastern politics. But she also reveals similarities between supposed contradictory cinemas and, importantly, not only how the Orient is constructed by the Occident but also how the Orient itself, in these cinemas, represents Self and Others and how it is consumed by internal as well as external struggles. This is a fascinating original contribution to the burgeoning interest in world cinemas which also offers a fresh way of seeing Middle East politics through cinematic lenses Creating a Modern Countryside James Murton, 2011-11-01 In the early 1900s British Columbia embarked on a brief but intense effort to manufacture a modern countryside The government wished to reward veterans of the Great War with new lives soliders and other settlers would benefit from living in a rural community considered a more healthy and moral alternative to urban life But the fundamental reason for the land resettlement project was the rise of progressive or new liberal thinking as reformers advocated an expanded role for the state in guaranteeing the prosperity and economic security of its citizens This ideological shift pushed the government to intervene directly in the management of not only society but also the natural environment As most arable accessible land in British Columbia was already being farmed by 1919 the state had to undertake environmental engineering projects on a scale not yet attempted in the province Creating a Modern Countryside examines how this process unfolded identifies its successes and failures and demonstrates how the human environment relationship of the early twentieth century shaped the province as it is today

In the Nature of Things Jane Bennett, William Chaloupka, 1993 Social Issues in America James Ciment, 2015-03-04 More than 150 key social issues confronting the United States today are covered in this eight volume set from abortion and adoption to capital punishment and corporate crime from obesity and organized crime to sweatshops and xenophobia
