Modernity And Housing:

Modernity and Housing Peter G. Rowe, 1993 Starting from the question of how can the design of modern housing can be successful Peter Rowe explores the social cultural and expressive history of housing at two crucial moments the first large scale developments along modernist lines in the 1920s and the widespread reconsideration of modernist principles in the 1970s Although the inquiry is conducted along historical and theoretical lines it proposes to uncover practical principles that may guide the design of modern housing each principle responding to a contemporary architectural paradox posed by modern conditions Six detailed case studies form the illustrative centerpiece of the book Modernity and Housing embraces three more or less parallel themes concerning modernity the rise of technocracy and the attendant tendency of modern space to become universal while the experience of time is confined to the present the problem of representation for a culture in which subject centered reason has replaced metaphysical foundations and social practices that give rise to urban concentrations and the production of mass housing on an unprecedented scale Within these themes the modern experience of space and time philosophically grounds discussion of local and traditional versus universal and novel building practices The perspective of subject centered reason grounds the exploration of the use of abstract forms and the concomitant problem of providing for an expressive architectural language while the unprecedented quantities of housing production raise the thorny issue of widely defining a normative building program that allows for local particularity The case studies cover Sunnyside Gardens New York Romerstadt Frankfurt am Main Kiefhoek Rotterdam Byker Redevelopment United Kingdom Villa Victoria United States Malagueira Quarter Portugal An appendix contains an annotated and statistical summary of all major housing projects described in the text about 40 with notes that include the date size place architect client housing type relative densities and other items of interest Peter G Rowe is Raymond Garbe Professor of Architecture and Urban Design and Dean of the Graduate School of Design at Harvard University His previous books include Design Thinking and Making a Middle Landscape

Manufacturing a Socialist Modernity Kimberly Elman Zarecor, 2011-04-10 Eastern European prefabricated housing blocks are often vilified as the visible manifestations of everything that was wrong with state socialism For many inside and outside the region the uniformity of these buildings became symbols of the dullness and drudgery of everyday life Manufacturing a Socialist Modernity complicates this common perception Analyzing the cultural intellectual and professional debates surrounding the construction of mass housing in early postwar Czechoslovakia Zarecor shows that these housing blocks served an essential function in the planned economy and reflected an interwar aesthetic derived from constructivism and functionalism that carried forward into the 1950s With a focus on prefabricated and standardized housing built from 1945 to 1960 Zarecor offers broad and innovative insights into the country's transition from capitalism to state socialism. She demonstrates that during this shift architects and engineers consistently strove to meet the needs of Czechs and Slovaks despite challenging economic conditions, a lack of material resources, and manufacturing and technological limitations. In the process, architects were asked to put aside their individual creative aspirations and transform themselves into technicians and industrial producers. Manufacturing a Socialist Modernity is the first comprehensive history of architectural practice and the emergence of prefabricated housing in the Eastern Bloc. Through discussions of individual architects and projects as well as building typologies, professional associations, and institutional organization, it opens a rare window into the cultural and economic life of Eastern Europe during the early postwar period.

The Routledge Companion to Modernity, Space and Gender Alexandra Staub, 2018-03-09 The Routledge Companion to Modernity, Space and Gender reframes the discussion of modernity, space, and gender by examining how modernity has been defined in various cultural contexts of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. How this definition has been expressed spatially and architecturally, and what effect this has had on women in their everyday lives. In doing so, this volume presents theories and methods for understanding space and gender as they relate to the development of cities, urban space, and individual building types such as housing, work spaces, or commercial spaces in both the creation of and resistance to social transformations and modern global capitalism. The book contains a diverse range of case studies from the US, Europe, the UK, and Asian countries such as China and India, which bring together a multiplicity of approaches to a continuing and common issue and reinforces the need for alternatives to the existing theoretical canon.

Modern Housing for America Gail Radford, 2008-10-03 In an era when many decry the failures of federal housing programs, this book introduces us to appealing but largely forgotten alternatives that existed when federal policies were first defined in the New Deal. Led by Catherine Bauer, supporters of the modern housing initiative argued that government should emphasize non-commercial development of imaginatively designed, compact neighborhoods with extensive parks and social services. The book explores the question of how Americans might have responded to this option through case studies of experimental developments in Philadelphia and New York. While defeated during the 1930s, modern housing ideas suggest a variety of design and financial strategies that could contribute to

Rowe, Har Ye Kan, 2014-08-20 Diversity and density in housing today Accommodation of diversity and the creation of urban density are a focus of world wide building and planning activities today This book combines the architectural and urban scales to demonstrate that it is a specific quality urban intensity which determines the success of housing The authors provide a typology of housing according to the ways in which diversity and density are created Comparisons with historical models and critical appraisals based on the authors' unique standing give ample information on the pros and cons of major types of housing their pitfalls and successful examples Newly created sets of drawings from floor plans to spectacular 3D aerial views of the buildings in their urban contexts accompany each of the more than twenty case studies that are described and analyzed in detail The approach taken here relates to many pressing issues in contemporary housing including the avoidance of urban sprawl the revival of city centers and the ongoing search for innovative housing types A qualitative approach to diversity and density in housing A concept that unites architectural and urban design A wide range of original drawings of benchmark case studies      The Challenge of Modernity Adelheid von Saldern, 2002 A collection of work in translation by the celebrated influential German historian Adelheid von Saldern      Planning and Housing in the Rapidly Urbanising World Paul Jenkins, Harry Smith, Ya Ping Wang, 2006-11-21 Written specifically as a teaching text and authored by a team of leading academics in the field this is the first book to bring together the key issues of rapid urbanisation with approaches to planning and housing Outlining and explaining core concepts from informal settlements to sustainability it focuses on the rapid urbanization of developing countries with case studies from Latin America Asia and Sub Saharan Africa The impact of rapid urbanization and associated globalization on land use and housing is described and analyzed with reference to the particular issues of poverty health and the environment of these areas Providing an accessible introduction to the key issues as well as enhancing current

Social Housing in the Middle East Mohammad Gharipour, Kivanc Kilinc, 2019-03-01 As oil rich countries in the Middle East are increasingly associated with soaring skyscrapers and modern architecture attention is being diverted away from the pervasive struggles of social housing in those same urban settings Social Housing in the Middle East traces the history of social housing both gleaming postmodern projects and bare bones urban housing structures in an effort to provide a wider understanding of marginalized spaces and their impact on identities communities and class While architects may have envisioned utopian or futuristic experiments these buildings were often constructed with the knowledge and skill sets of local workers and the housing was in turn adapted to suit the modern needs of residents This tension between local needs and national aspirations are linked to issues of global importance including security migration and refugee resettlement The essays collected here consider how culture faith and politics influenced the solutions offered by social housing they provide an insightful look at how social housing has evolved since the 19th century and how it will need to adapt to suit the 21st
