

Bandpass Noise

At the receiver input, noise is injected. This noise represents all the equivalent noise effects of all noise sources referred to the receiver input. All noise sources are assumed to be white and uncorrelated with the signal or any other noise source. The predetection filter is a bandpass filter with frequency response $H_R(f)$ having unity gain over the transmission bandwidth B_T . Then the total signal plus noise at the detector is $v(t) = x_c(t) + n(t)$ where $n(t)$ is the predetection noise. Then the detected signal is lowpass filtered to yield the final signal $y_D(t)$.
