Zboray, Mary Saracino Zboray,2000 The Reader in the Book Stephen Orgel,2015-10-29 The Reader in the Book is concerned with a particular aspect of the history of the book an archeology and sociology of the use of margins and other blank spaces One of the most commonplace aspects of old books is the fact that people wrote in them something that until very recently has infuriated modern collectors and librarians But these inscriptions constitute a significant dimension of the book's history and what readers did to books often added to their value Sometimes marks in books have no relation to the subject of the book merely names dates prices paid blank spaces were used for pen trials and doing sums and flyleaves are occasionally the repository of records of various kinds The Reader in the Book deals with that special class of books in which the text and marginalia are in intense communication with each other in which reading constitutes an active and sometimes adversarial engagement with the book The major examples are works that are either classics or were classics in their own time but they are seen here as contemporaries read them without the benefit of centuries of commentary and critical guidance The underlying question is at what point marginalia the legible incorporation of the work of reading into the text of the book became a way of defacing it rather than of increasing its value why did we want books to lose their history Transition, 1929 Magazine featuring talents in art architecture music and literature Bookseller & Stationer and Office Equipment Journal, 1925
