McNicol Stock,2020-09-18 Militarization and nuclearization were the historical developments most essential to the creation of the rural New Right Both North Dakota and South Dakota have long been among the most reliably Republican states in the nation in the past century voters have only chosen two Democrats Franklin Roosevelt and Lyndon B Johnson and in 2016 both states preferred Donald Trump by over thirty points Yet in the decades before World War II the people of the Northern Plains were not universally politically conservative Instead many Dakotans including Republicans supported experiments in agrarian democracy that incorporated ideas from populism and progressivism to socialism and communism and fought against bigness in all its forms including bonanza farms out of state railroads corporations banks corrupt political parties and distant federal bureaucracies but also surprisingly the culture of militarism and the expansion of American military power abroad In Nuclear Country Catherine McNicol Stock explores the question of why between 1968 and 1992 most voters in the Dakotas abandoned their distinctive ideological heritage and came to embrace the conservatism of the New Right Stock focuses on how this transformation coincided with the coming of the military and national security states to the countryside via the placement of military bases and nuclear missile silos on the Northern Plains This militarization influenced regional political culture by reinforcing or re contextualizing long standing local ideas and practices particularly when the people of the plains found that they shared culturally conservative values with the military After adopting the first two planks of the New Right national defense and conservative social ideas Dakotans endorsed the third plank of New Right ideology fiscal conservatism Ultimately Stock contends that militarization and nuclearization were the historical developments most essential to the creation of the rural New Right throughout the United States and that their impact can best be seen in this often overlooked region's history Life Stories Maureen O'Connor,2011-08-23 Memoirs autobiographies and diaries

Meet Joe Copper Matthew L. Basso, 2022-12-22 I realize that I am a soldier of production whose duties are as important in this war as those of the man behind the gun So began the pledge that many home front men took at the outset of World War II when they went to work in the factories fields and mines while their compatriots fought in the battlefields of Europe and on the bloody beaches of the Pacific The male experience of working and living in wartime America is rarely examined but the story of men like these provides a crucial counter narrative to the national story of Rosie the Riveter and GI Joe that dominates scholarly and popular discussions of World War II In Meet Joe Copper Matthew L Basso describes the formation of a powerful white working class masculine ideology in the decades prior to the war and shows how it thrived on the job in the community and through union politics Basso recalls for us the practices and beliefs of the first and second generation immigrant copper workers of Montana while advancing the historical conversation on gender class and the formation of a white ethnic racial identity Meet Joe Copper provides a context for our ideas of postwar masculinity and whiteness and finally returns the men of the home front to our reckoning of the Greatest Generation and the New Deal era
