London Pride: When the World Was Younger Mary Elizabeth Braddon, 2020-09-28 A rainy summer and a mild rainy autumn had been followed by the hardest frost this generation had ever known The Thames was frozen over and tempestuous winds had shaken the ships in the Pool and the steep gable ends and tall chimney stacks on London Bridge A never to be forgotten winter which had witnessed the martyrdom of England s King and the exile of her chief nobility while a rabble Parliament rode roughshod over a cowed people Gloom and sour visages prevailed the maypoles were down the play houses were closed the bear gardens were empty the cock pits were desolate and a saddened population impoverished and depressed by the sacrifices that had been exacted and the tyranny that had been exercised in the name of Liberty were ground under the iron heel of Cromwell s red coats The pitiless journey from London to Louvain a journey of many days and nights prolonged by accident and difficulty had been spun out to uttermost tedium for those two in the heavily moving old leathern coach Who and what were they these wearied travellers journeying together silently towards a destination which promised but little of pleasure or luxury by way of welcome a destination which meant severance for those two One was Sir John Kirkland of the Manor Moat Bucks a notorious

Malignant a grey bearded cavalier aged by trouble and hard fighting a soldier and servant who had sacrificed himself and his fortune for the King and must needs begin the world anew now that his master was murdered his own goods confiscated the old family mansion the house in which his parents died and his children were born emptied of all its valuables and left to the care of servants and his master's son a wanderer in a foreign land with little hope of ever winning back crown and sceptre Sadness was the dominant expression of Sir John's stern strongly marked countenance as he sat staring out at the level landscape through the unglazed coach window staring blankly across those wind swept Flemish fields where the cattle were clustering in sheltered corners a monotonous expanse crossed by ice bound dykes that looked black as ink save where the last rays of the setting sun touched their iron hue with blood red splashes Pollard willows indicated the edge of one field gaunt poplars marked the boundary of another alike leafless and unbeautiful standing darkly out against the dim grey sky Night was hastening towards the travellers narrowing and blotting out that level landscape field dyke and leafless wood

Gorman, 2021-07-27 When it was first published in 2001 Cruciformity broke new ground with a vision of Pauline spirituality that illuminated what it meant to be a person or community in Christ Beginning with Paul's express desire to know nothing but Christ crucified Gorman showed how true spirituality is telling the story in both life and words of God's self revelation in Jesus so that we might practice cruciformity the impossible possibility of conformity to the crucified Christ Two decades later Gorman's seminal work is still a powerful model for combining biblical studies and theological reflection to make Paul's letters more immediately relevant to contemporary Christian life This twentieth anniversary edition includes a new foreword by Nijay Gupta a next generation Pauline scholar heavily influenced by Gorman as well as an afterword by the author in which he reflects on the legacy of Cruciformity in the church and the academy including his own subsequent work in Pauline theology Kierkegaard's Theology of Encounter David James Lappano, 2017 This study considers the social and political aspects of Kierkegaard's authorship building upon work over the last couple of decades Dr Lappano focuses on Kierkegaard's writing between 1846 and 1852 the period of Kierkegaard's more explicitly politicized writing

Forget Adam Weinberger Vincent Engel, 2024-11-26 First there is Adam Weinberger's long childhood in a world that has no idea yet what is in store for it The childhood of a lover of illusions who dreams of changing the world and of freeing his family from the burden of a tradition that he finds unbearable The adolescence of a young boy who is unable to express his love for Esther his admiration for his uncle his tenderness toward his mother The helplessness of a young man who sees that dreams and fiction are unable to halt the destruction of this world and its inhabitants Later there are fragments of narrations the broken mirror that through more or less well meaning intermediaries reflects the flight of this child who has become a man who no longer believes in dreams who no longer believes in words who has taken refuge in gestures those of his profession medicine and those of his great passion the construction of ships in bottles And who flees words and other people to the point of losing his identity Between the two is there of which one dares not speak And then in the end after forgetting at the end of all the flights there is the return of childhood from beyond death the single truth of a work of fiction of the narration of a life
