

Industrialisation

The industrial strength of Germany rapidly increased under Wilhelm II.

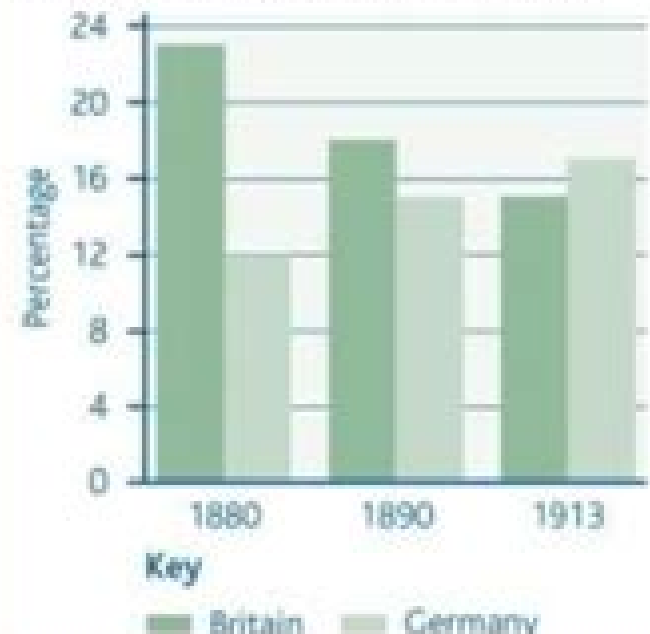

For example, in 1880 Germany was only producing half as much steel as Britain. By 1914 it was producing over twice as much as Britain.

By 1914, Germany was producing one-third of the world's electrical goods. Its telephone system was the most advanced in the world. Germany also led the world in chemical and steel industries. Foreign trade flourished and exports rose rapidly.

The population of Germany rose from 40 million in 1871 to 68 million in 1914. This growth provided the manpower for the growing industrial cities.

▼ B The success of German industry. This bar chart shows the changing percentage share of world industrial production for Britain and Germany.

Environment Geoffrey W. R. Palmer, 1995 Ecological Restoration in International Environmental Law Anastasia Telesetsky, An Cliquet, Afshin Akhtar-Khavari, 2016-12-01 Human activities are depleting ecosystems at an unprecedented rate. In spite of nature conservation efforts worldwide many ecosystems including those critical for human well being have been damaged or destroyed. States and citizens need a new vision of how humans can reconnect with the natural environment. With its focus on the long term holistic recovery of ecosystems ecological restoration has received increasing attention in the past decade from both scientists and policymakers. Research on the implications of ecological restoration for the law and law for ecological restoration has been largely overlooked. This is the first published book to examine comprehensively the relationship between international environmental law and ecological restoration. While international environmental law IEL has developed significantly as a discipline over the past four decades this book enquires whether IEL can now assist states in making a strategic transition from not just protecting and maintaining the natural environment but also actively restoring it. Arguing that states have international duties to restore this book offers reflections on the philosophical context of ecological restoration and the legal content of a duty to restore from an international law European Union law and national law perspective. The book concludes with a discussion of several contemporary themes of interest to both lawyers and ecologists including the role of private actors protected areas and climate change in ecological restoration.
