Population Growth and Agricultural Change in Africa Billie Lee Turner, Göran Hydén, Robert William Kates, 1993 The question that drives the ten case studies of highland East Africa and Nigeria commissioned for this volume is whether population growth in densely settled areas of rural Africa has led to the intensification of agriculture Using a natural experiments methodology the authors explore changes in agricultural inputs and outputs analyze the role that external productive forces have played in these changes note the consequences of the changes especially for the environment and standard of living and speculate on the changes implications The volume is framed by chapters on theory one that presents traditional thought on the relationship between population and agriculture and one that offers a synthesis that while controversial holds out real hope for African agriculture American Book Publishing Record, 1973 Business Books and Serials in Print, 1977 Population Growth and Agrarian Change David B. Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, Population Growth and Agrarian Change, 1975 Conditions of Agricultural Growth Ester Boserup, 2013-11-05 Investigating the process of agrarian change this book analyzes costs and productivity under the main systems of primitive agriculture The conclusion is that technical economic and social changes are unlikely to take place within primitive agriculture unless the rural community concerned is exposed to the pressure of population growth a conclusion that is in sharp contrast to generally accepted ideas The themes in the book are central to the discussion of the problems of population explosion and the world's undernourished peoples Comparative Study of Population Growth and Agricultural Change United Nations.
