Population And Emigration Government And Society In Nineteenth Century Britain:

Forkhill Protestants and Forkhill Catholics, 1787-1858 Kyla Madden, 2005-11-22 In the late eighteenth century an influx of Protestant settlers to the mainly Catholic parish of Forkhill on the Ulster borderlands provoked clashes between natives and newcomers None was more horrific than the brutal attack on a Protestant schoolmaster and his family in the winter of 1791 The conflict was immediately cast in sectarian terms leading to more than 200 years of ill will But was it a misdiagnosis Forkhill Protestants and Forkhill Catholics explores the social history of the parish between 1787 and 1858 In a wide ranging analysis Kyla Madden demonstrates that there was a greater degree of cooperation and exchange between Catholics and Protestants than the historical record has acknowledged Madden contends that since some of our widely held assumptions about the patterns of Irish history dissolve under scrutiny at the local level they should be more cautiously applied on a larger scale

Whitewashing Britain Kathleen Paul, 2018-09-05 Kathleen Paul challenges the usual explanation for the racism of post war British policy According to standard historiography British public opinion forced the Conservative government to introduce legislation stemming the flow of dark skinned immigrants and thereby altering an expansive nationality policy that had previously allowed all British subjects free entry into the United Kingdom Paul s extensive archival research shows however that the racism of ministers and senior functionaries led rather than followed public opinion In the late 1940s the Labour government faced a birthrate perceived to be in decline massive economic dislocations caused by the war a huge national debt severe labor shortages and the prospective loss of international preeminence Simultaneously it subsidized the emigration of Britons to Australia Canada and other parts of the Empire recruited Irish citizens and European refugees to work in Britain and used regulatory changes to dissuade British subjects of color from coming to the United Kingdom Paul contends post war concepts of citizenship were based on a contradiction between the formal definition of who had the right to enter Britain and the informal notion of who was or could become really British Whitewashing Britain extends this analysis to contemporary issues such as the fierce engagement in the Falklands War and the curtailment of citizenship options for residents of Hong Kong Paul finds the politics of citizenship in contemporary Britain still haunted by a mixture of imperial economic and demographic imperatives
