To date there has been no comprehensive survey of the site's petroglyphs or those who created them. Since the 1960s regional mining interests have caused significant damage to this site, destroying an estimated 5 to 25 percent of the petroglyphs in Murujuga. Today Murujuga holds the unenviable status of being one of the most endangered archaeological sites in the world. Jos Antonio Gonz lez Zarandona provides a full postcolonial analysis of Murujuga as well as a geographic and archaeological overview of the site, its ethnohistory, and its considerable significance to Indigenous groups before examining the colonial mistreatment of Murujuga from the seventeenth century to the present. Drawing on a range of postcolonial perspectives, Zarandona reads the assaults on the rock art of Murujuga as instances of what he terms landscape iconoclasm: the destruction of art and landscapes central to group identity in pursuit of ideological, political, and economic dominance. Viewed through the lens of landscape iconoclasm, the destruction of Murujuga can be understood as not only the result of economic pressures but also as a means of reinforcing through neglect, abandonment, fragmentation, and even certain practices of heritage preservation the colonial legacy in Western Australia. Murujuga provides a case study through which to examine and begin to reject archaeology's global entanglement with colonial intervention and the politics of heritage preservation.

In this comprehensive study, Kenneth Morgan provides an authoritative account of European exploration and discovery in Australia. The book presents a detailed chronological overview of European interests in the Australian continent from initial speculations about the Great Southern Land to the major hydrographic expeditions of the 19th century. In particular, he analyses the early crossings of the Dutch in the 17th century, the exploits of English buccaneer adventurer William Dampier, the famous voyages of James Cook and Matthew Flinders, and the little known French annexation of Australia in 1772. Introducing new findings and drawing on the latest in historiographical research, this book situates developments in navigation, nautical astronomy and cartography within the broader contexts of imperial, colonial and maritime history.
