Research Outlook, Innovations & Research Trends in Economics Prof. Dr. Elena Battaglini, Dr. Prashant P. Chaudhari, Mrs. Priyanka Gupta, 2020-10-25. Scientific theories are representational spaces in which we model the world. Therefore, science undergoes periodic paradigm shifts instead of progressing in a linear and continuous way. Paradigm shifts occur when old paradigms show their inadequacy and ineffectiveness. What is defined as research is reevaluated; concepts turn upside down, and earlier research is reinterpreted. Covid-19 brought to the fore the rise of a new paradigm that in 2016 the sociologist Ulrich Beck understood and framed as metamorphosis of the world. Beck (2016) identifies global risks: climate change, resource depletion, migrations, and distributive forms of social inequalities that often escape the traditional interpretative categories of the mainstream economy, class, nation, etc., and normative concepts like sustainable development. In this perspective, the regional scale in social studies and policies is crucial. Risks are assuming, in fact, different geographies in relation to the different territorial morphologies or social inequalities involved. To what extent is this paradigm shift challenging either mainstream economics or our critical thinking and awareness as social scientists? Despite a body of studies that until the first half of the twentieth century had not taken into
